BATTLESHIP SUNK; 1,400 DIE

FATHER OF GIRL SHOT BY SUITOR

BROOKFIELD, N. H., May 24.—Nathan Rand, a millworker, is under arrest at Sanbornville, and Arthur Schedell, a prosperous farmer, is dangerously injured and probably dying of bullet wounds, as a result of a shooting which followed the elopement of Rand and Schedell's daughter.

The girl, Ellen Schedell, is fifteen years old and a pupil in the schools here. Late Thursday night she stole out of her home, met Rand and went with him and a friend by automobile to Concord, where they arrived at 4.30 in the morning.

While attempting to secure a marriage license that morning they were arrested and the girl's father was notified.

Mr. Schedell hurried to Concord and took his daughter home. Rand returned to his work.

Last night, between 9 and 10 o'clock, according to the Sanbornville police, Rand went to the Schedell home and fired two shots through a window at Mr. Schedell. The first struck him in the abdomen, the second in the chest.

Rand pocketed his revolver, went to Sanbornville and gave himself up. Chief W. H. Nichols of Sanbornville said today he is held on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Mr. Schedell was found to be dangerously injured and today it was expected he would die from his wounds.

Ellen Schedell, the girl over whom the trouble started, is the elder of two children. The other is a boy. She is an unusually pretty child.

Her mother, Mrs. Schedell, died about a month ago.

Cardinal O'Connell Confined to Home

Cardinal O'Connell is slightly ill at his residence on Granby street. On account of his illness he was forced to cancel his engagement to lay the corner-stone of the new $150,000 buildings at St. John's Preparatory College in Danvers.

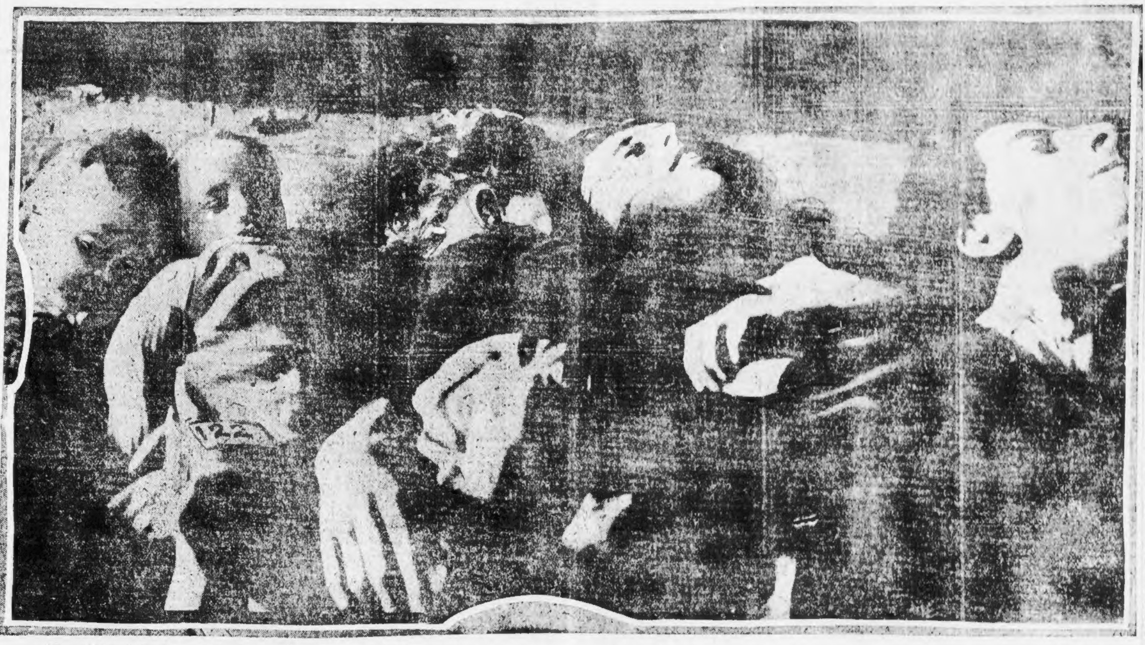
MOST PATHETIC OF THE LUSITANIA PICTURES



Most pitiful of all the scenes ashore that followed the torpedoing and sinking of the great Cunard liner off the Irish coast on May 7, was that corner of the temporary morgue at Queenstown where the bodies of the babies who perished were laid to await identification or burial in a common grave. One of the little ones is tightly clasping the body of her dead mother.

Turkish Gunboat Sunk by Submarine

CONSTANTINOPLE, via Berlin and Amsterdam, May 24.—The War Office announced today that the Turkish torpedo gunboat Pelenk-I-Deria was torpedoed by a hostile submarine at the Dardanelles Sunday, and sunk in deep water. One hundred and nine members of her crew were saved, but two were drowned.

The Pelenk-I-Deria was a vessel of 586 tons. She was built at Kiel, Germany, in 1890, and in recent years had been used as a depot ship for the Turkish torpedo flotilla.

REPORT 12,600 TON RUSSIAN BATTLESHIP SUNK, WITH 1,400 MEN

BERLIN, May 24—(By Wireless)—The Overseas News Agency today announced the receipt of a dispatch from Bucharest, stating that the Russian battleship Panteleimon had been sunk in the Black Sea with 1,400 men. The naval record gives the complement of the Panteleimon as 741 men. She was a vessel of 12,582 tons, 378 feet long and 73 feet in the beam. Her armament consisted of four 12-inch guns in pairs in turrets, fore and aft; sixteen 6-inch guns, four to a casemate; a 12-inch battery; fourteen 3-inch guns; six 3-pounders and five 18-inch torpedo tubes.

Four Bills Signed by the Governor

Governor Walsh has signed these four bills, which become operative as laws at once:

To allow cities and towns to establish day as well as evening classes in practical arts for women.

To transfer the West Roxbury Parkway from the city of Boston to the care and control of the Metropolitan Park Commission.

To pay $1,000 to Catherine A. Walsh, widow of District Chief Michael Walsh of the Boston Fire Department, who died from injuries received December 2, 1914, while in the performance of his duty.

To direct the State Forest Commission to investigate the advisability of establishing a State forest along Mohawk trail, in Franklin and Berkshire counties.

AUSTRIANS BEGIN BIG STRUGGLE

By BRIXTON D'ALLAIRE.
Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

ROME, May 24.—Austria has opened her warfare against Italy with air attacks, laughed against Venice, Porto Corsini, Ancona, Barletta and Gesi.

Austrian aeroplanes at Venice bombarded the arsenal.

The cities mentioned lie along the eastern part of Italy on the Adriatic. The aeroplanes are believed to have sailed from Trieste or Pola and to have flown across the upper part of the Adriatic during the night.

Venice lies about eighty-five miles west of Trieste. Ancona is 110 miles south of Venice and an air raid upon that city from Trieste would mean a [illegible] flight of about 200 [illegible].

Barletta is near the southern entrance of the Adriatic.

[illegible] most of the cities are naval [illegible] stations and ammunition depots.

Hostilities on land have also begun in the war between Italy and the Teutonic allies.

Austrian troops were the first to attack, but the clash resulted in a success for the Italian Alpine Chasseurs, who drove the Austrian invaders back upon their own soil through a mountain pass between Pont Di Lego and Pejo.

Count Luigo Cadorna, chief of staff of the Italian army, has left for the front. He was accompanied by the Duke D'Aosta, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel.

Great headquarters will be established at Bologna. The court will be moved to Florence.

King Victor Emmanuel may follow the example of King Albert of Belgium and lead his Italian troops in the field. In doing so he would also follow the example set by his grandfather, who, with the aid of Cavour and Garibaldi, established united Italy.

A dispatch from Basle quotes the Wolff Bureau, the official news agency of Germany, as saying that the German government has declared war against Italy.

TEXT OF ITALIAN DECLARATION OF WAR ON AUSTRIA-HUNGARY

AMSTERDAM, via London, May 24. [illegible] the Duke of Avarna, the presented to Baron Von Burian, the Austro-Hungarian foreign minister, the following declaration of war:

"Vienna, May [illegible], 1915.

"In accordance with the orders of the King, his august master, the [illegible] ambassador of Italy has the honor to deliver [illegible] to the foreign minister of Austria-Hungary the following communication:

"[illegible]

"The government of the King, [illegible] resolved to provide by all means at its disposal [illegible] rights and interests [illegible] the fulfillment of national aspirations.

"His majesty the King declares that he considers himself from tomorrow in a state of war with Austria-Hungary.

"The undersigned has the honor to make known at the same time to his excellency the foreign minister that passports will be handed this very day at the disposal of the imperial and royal ambassador at Rome and he will be obliged to his excellency if he will kindly have his passports handed to him.

"(Signed) AVARNA."

BRITISH FORCE MAKES ADVANCE AT FESTUBERT

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, May 24.—Another advance for the British at Festubert, south of Neuve Chapelle in northern France, and the repulse of German counter attacks in which the Germans were mowed down by the score by British artillery are reported in official dispatches from the front today. The following official statement, based upon these dispatches, was issued by the government press bureau:

"British troops made a further advance in the sector of Festubert on Saturday. A German counter attack, delivered early in the morning, was met with a withering fire from our artillery. The Germans were mowed down by the score. The attack was shattered and few of the German soldiers escaped."

EMPEROR RALLIES AUSTRIAN ARMY

By STEVEN BURNETT,

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

VIENNA, via Berlin and Amsterdam, May 24.—Emperor Francis Joseph has issued a proclamation to the army saying:

"Soldiers of the Empire: The King of Italy has declared war against me. An act of perfidy, the like of which has never been known in history, has been committed by the King of Italy against both of his allies. After an alliance of thirty years, Italy has abandoned us to our dangers. Soldiers, your duty for your Emperor and your Fatherland lies plainly before you.

"We did not menace Italy, did not [illegible] her authority, did not attack her honor or interests. We always [illegible] loyally in the duties of our alliance and afforded our protection when she took the field. We have done more. When Italy directed covetous glances across our frontier, we, [illegible] to maintain peace and our [illegible] relations, resolved on great [illegible] sacrifices which [illegible] our paternal heart.

NEW, TREACHEROUS ENEMY.

"But the covetousness of Italy, [illegible] the moment should be used, was not to be appeased, so fate must be accommodated.

"My armies have victoriously withstood mighty armies in the north in ten months of this gigantic conflict in most loyal comradeship of arms with our illustrious ally. A new and treacherous enemy in the south is to [illegible] new enemy. Great memories of Novara, Mortara and Lissa, which [illegible] the pride of my youth; the spirit of Radetzky, Archduke Albrecht and Tegethoff, which continues to live in my land and sea forces, guarantees that in the south also we shall successfully defend the frontier of the monarchy.

"I salute my battle-tried troops who are inured to victory. I rely on them and their leaders. I rely on my peoples, for whose unexampled spirit of sacrifice my most paternal thanks are due.

"I pray the Almighty to bless our colors and take under His gracious protection our just cause."

Full responsibility for the war is placed upon the Rome government in an imperial manifesto also issued by the Emperor.

The aged ruler expresses his deep regret that hostilities should have been brought about between the former allies, but asserts that the cause of Austria is wholly just.

CHARGES BREACH OF FAITH.

"The Italian declaration of war is a breach of faith," declares the Emperor.

The manifesto appeals to the people of Austria-Hungary to support the national honor.

Throughout this and other Austro-Hungarian cities Sunday was a day of patriotic demonstrations. Fiery speeches were delivered before government buildings. Soldiers and officers were wildly greeted as they passed through the streets and great crowds, bearing the Austrian flag, marched through the city shouting, "Down with Italy" and "Down with the traitors."

Berlin Breaks Off Relations with Italy

By FREDERICK WERNER.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, May 24.—Diplomatic relations between Germany and Italy were severed today, according to an announcement made here.

War will follow. Germany will support her ally Austria in every possible way.

The Italian ambassador, Signor Bollati, is leaving immediately. He will take back with him to Rome a personal dispatch from Emperor William, bidding the envoy farewell and asking him to express to King Victor Emmanuel the general indignation in Germany over the action of Italy.

Berlin newspapers criticise Italy bitterly today. They accuse the Rome government of treachery, but at the same time assert that Germany and Austria will give their former ally the punishment it deserves.

DESPITE LOSSES GERMANS RESUME ATTACKS IN WEST

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, May 24.—Despite their heavy losses near Ypres and north of Arras, the Germans have resumed their offensive in both regions, according to today's French communique.

The attacks of the Kaiser's troops at Steenstraate and Ypres were repulsed by the allied troops, while north of Arras fighting that lasted all night resulted in favor of the French, the communique says.

GERMAN LOSS AT LORETTE 4,000

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

Special Correspondent of the International News Service.

PARIS, May 24.—Three thousand German soldiers were killed and 1,000 taken prisoners in the French victory that resulted in the capture of the Lorette Heights. The opposing forces were engaged in a sanguinary battle for thirteen days, but an official statement issued here today says that the French troops were triumphant, taking Lorette and the German works on the White Way.

"In capturing Lorette Heights we have attained one of the principal objectives of our movement north of Arras," the statement says.

After setting forth that the French objective against Lorette had continued since October, the statement, written by an official eyewitness at French headquarters, continues:

"The bloody battle which in thirteen days made us masters of that strong position constituted for our troops a magnificent victory. That the enemy attached great value to Lorette Mountain is shown by the fact that he made great efforts to hold it and also to recapture it.

"He had powerful defensive works and the natural configuration of the ground tended to assure him of its possession.

"In the course of the fighting we killed on the plateau and its supporting defences 3,000 Germans, whose bodies have been counted. We also took 1,000 prisoners, as well as a quantity of material.

"That which actually is in our possession represents only a small part of our booty, for each day in traversing the ground we recover numbers of machine guns, bomb-throwers and rifles buried in the shattered ditches and in the wrecked shelters.

"The magnificent heroism of our infantry cost us heavy losses. Our troops nevertheless triumphed, thanks to their admirable valor and their solidarity, of which they gave proof in the course of a conflict that was often confused and mingled the units of all the corps engaged.

What Do You Drink With Your Meals?

WHY NOT BEER? Dr. F. W. Pavy, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, London, adds his testimony to that of the other eminent men who have made a scientific study of beer, by saying that "beer is a refreshing, exhilarating nutritive. A light beer, well flavored with the hops, is calculated to promote digestion and may be looked upon as constituting one of the most wholesome of the alcoholic beverages."

Try a bottle of beer with your meals for the next few weeks and we believe that you will see beneficial results.

The home trade is the trade we cater to—that is one reason why we use selected barley malt and the best imported hops and give every drop of Harvard Green Label four months' age. For sale at

LUSITANIA SURVIVOR BLAMES CAPTAIN AND CREW OF LINER

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, May 24.—Nine bodies of Lusitania victims arrived here today on board the American liner New York, which came into port through a thick fog bank with her flag at half mast. A thrilling story of the catastrophe was told by Dr. Carl E. Foss of Harlem, Montana, who was a survivor of the Lusitania and who returned on the New York.

The bodies brought into port were those of Charles Frohman, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Plamondon of Chicago, Mrs. Frances King of New York, Professor Carl T. Broderick of Harvard University, Arthur H. Foley of Trenton, N. J., Isaac F. Trumbull of Bridgeport, Ct., Miss H. Ellis of St. Thomas, Ont., and Miss McBright of New York.

Dr. Foss, who went abroad to do Red Cross work in France, roundly condemned the policy of the Lusitania's captain and declared that the crew showed a lack of preparedness in time of disaster.

"I saw one submarine at [illegible] the Lusitania was struck," [illegible] Dr. Foss.

DR. FOSS' STORY.

"This was about 1.15 in the afternoon and I was standing at the rail looking at the Irish coast through my glasses. The submarine was about a mile away keeping pace with us, and I watched it for some time [illegible] while amusing to other passengers on the deck that I had seen a German submarine. For the next five minutes all of us watched it and then it suddenly submerged.

Right here I want to condemn the policy of the Cunard line that was saving fuel. Even when the crew reported the presence of the submarine the officers did not speed up the ship.

Nothing happened for a while so I went down to lunch. I had just begun to eat when an explosion occurred. I think that as we went on deck most of us feared that the ship was going to sink. I know I did.

NO HELP FROM STEWARD.

The first thing I saw on deck was a bunch of stewards opening a box of life preservers and putting them on, meanwhile not offering a bit of help to the passengers. I pushed in among them and got a life preserver, which I buckled on myself.

By that time it was only a matter of seconds until the ship sank, so I went to the port side, which was the highest out of water, and jumped overboard. I struck the water near the propellers and could hear them churning the waters.

As I started to swim away I saw a lifeboat, containing five men, plunge bow first from the davits. One poor fellow was cast against the side of the ship and his legs were caught in the propellers. He screamed horribly and the foam was soon red with his blood. I swam in close and grabbed him by the arm, pulling with might and main. He was done for, but I did what I could for him. As I swam away I could hear the lifeboat being crushed to bits by the propeller blades.

THREE HOURS IN WATER.

A hundred yards away I came upon a woman with a life preserver fastened on her body and a baby in her arms.

I towed them both to a lifeboat containing about twenty-five persons and helped them on board. I saw the boat was filled to capacity and swam away from it. A water-logged boat filled with thirty hysterical men and women floated toward me. As I looked it was caught by a wave and turned over. Not more than fifteen of the occupants came to the surface.

I came upon two women who faintly begged me to help them; both wore life preservers. I found an oar and told them to hold to it while I picked our way toward shore. We were chilled through and through and would not have been able to hold on much longer, but just then we sighted a life raft and made for it. It was three hours later when the steamer Indian Empire picked us up.

Five Are Killed in Dredger Explosion

BORDENTOWN, N. J., May 24.—Five persons were killed today when a boiler exploded on the sand dredging machine Delaware, owned by the Delaware River Dredging Company. The dead are: Anthony Mattie, captain; John Varley, engineer, and the wife and two children of Harry Stout, steward, who had come to visit Stout.

Boston Bridal Follows Palm Beach Romance

A romance that began at Palm Beach will culminate tomorrow morning in the marriage of Miss Vera Natalie Beach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark E. Beach of No. 55 [illegible] street, Dorchester, and Sheldon Alva Wood, a Detroit attorney.

Miss Beach is twenty; Mr. Wood fifty-six. The Rev. G. A. [illegible] will perform the ceremony.

Miss Helen Turner of California, a cousin of Mr. Wood, will attend the bride, and the best man will be Mr. Wood's brother, Albert Fenlin Wood.

The honeymoon will take the pair to Philadelphia, Chicago and California. They will live in Detroit.

Miss Beach is a graduate of the Gilman School on Commonwealth avenue. Her mother, a daughter of the late General C. A. Alligood, is an author, writing under the name of "Alligood Beach."

100,000 Visitors at Revere Beach

Greater Boston open-air resorts took on a mid-summer appearance yesterday on what the beach and park merchants declared was the first real "business day" of the year. Nantasket and Revere Beach were thronged and all that was needed for the finishing touch of a July 4 picture was the bathers. The metropolitan park police estimated there were 100,000 persons at Revere Beach.

Tries Five Times to Fire Liner New York

NEW YORK, May 24.—James Barrie, at one time a New York pugilist, was arrested today when the liner New York was docked and taken to Ellis Island for observation as to his sanity. The officers of the liner reported that he tried five times to set fire to the ship while it was proceeding to America from England.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE LEGISLATURE OF 1915 AND ITS QUEER WAYS

By JOHN T. LAMBERT.

[illegible] Legislature [illegible] Boston American [illegible].

"It is according to the same signs [illegible] appreciation of the [illegible] in a Legislature which is coming to be known as one of the [illegible]."

* * *

[illegible] Ways and Means Committee [illegible] probably [illegible] to be [illegible] the last weeks of the Legislature this year [illegible] good excuse for [illegible] bill."

* * *

Public [illegible] has become so [illegible] that it is inconceivable that [illegible] Legislature will further [illegible] Walsh's [illegible].

But [illegible] the Legislature is apparently pursuing its [illegible].

* * *

Committee hearings are by custom the great public forum of the people interested in legislation. They afford the people the best opportunity of being heard for or against pending measures.

Serious charges were recently preferred [illegible] State Commission against the Fish and Game Commissioners.

It was charged that the State's money was being used for the personal expenses of the commissioners.

[illegible] of the commission was [illegible].

Scores of [illegible] were present to be heard.

Commissioners against whom the charges were lodged were present to testify in their own behalf.

But the committee in charge of the hearing threw out the matter on a technical point of order.

There was no hearing.

* * *

Early in the session a [illegible] filed a bill to provide for the better protection of [illegible] game and [illegible].

The matter was disposed of, [illegible].

The committee ruled that this bill and the proposed reorganization of the Fish and Game Commission were [illegible] subjects.

Therefore, the committee ruled, a "point of order" would prevent the [illegible] of the proposed reorganization.

A "point of order" is a matter of interpretation, not by a committee, but by the Speaker of the House or President of the Senate.

The committee found a [illegible] means of avoiding its responsibility.

* * *

Governor Walsh recommended an investigation of telephone rates.

A similar investigation saved the people of New York city $[illegible] a year in their telephone charges.

The Public Service Commission [illegible] recommended the investigation.

But the Senate killed it.

Forty Senators were present.

Only seven were necessary to [illegible] a rollcall, which would have enabled the public to know how their Senators voted.

There was no rollcall.

* * *

The matter was previously heard by the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

Various persons interested in the telephone situation had requested to be notified of the meeting in advance.

But four people were notified.

One of the four was the vice president of the telephone company.

The committee reported [illegible] the investigation.

* * *

Scrub women employed at the State House asked for a pension on which to retire when they were no longer able to work.

The scrubwomen had no lobby.

Their request was turned down.

The same week the Legislature approved bills for committee junkets, [illegible] and other things, amounting to $[illegible].

That amount would have paid the pensions for the scrubwomen for the next six years.

* * *

The four coal shovelers who fire the boilers at the State House asked for an increase in salary.

They wanted an increase of $[illegible] a year, a total of $[illegible] for the four of them.

Their request was denied.

But the Legislature subsequently passed a bill allowing an additional $2,000 a year for the small clerical force in the House Clerk's office.

* * *

Representative Holway of Bourne says he filed a petition which would compel the Cape Cod Canal Company to build a bridge across the canal for the use of the [illegible] people who are shut off from the mainland.

The petition was not admitted to the Legislature for consideration.

"They turned it down," said Mr. Holway, "on the ground that it was filed too late. But more than [illegible] other petitions filed later than mine have been admitted."

He added: "Perhaps [illegible] expense to [illegible] the Cape Cod Canal Company."

Mr. Holway has protested to the Public Service Commission that the ferry used by the company in lieu of a bridge is exposing the people to constant danger of their lives.

* * *

The real estate editor of The AMERICAN has been faithfully exposing the land frauds [illegible] in the [illegible] district of the State.

Senator Gifford owns real estate down there and sells it.

"I have constantly refused to sell my property to real estate sharks," says the Senator.

He filed a bill to make the "sharks" issue maps describing every piece of property they [illegible] for sale.

The Legislature killed the bill.

* * *

The legislators themselves have finally begun to throw bricks at each other and at themselves.

The insurance bills affecting Workmen's Compensation Insurance, introduced by the special commission that investigated the matter for the Governor, were defeated by the Senate.

Senator Norwood fought to have the Senate reconsider its action.

"Nobody in the honorable Senate paid any attention to the bills when you were killing them," said Senator Norwood.

"That's nothing, said Senator Cavanagh of Everett, "your committee has fifteen members, but when these bills were heard [illegible] members were present [illegible]."

* * *

When [illegible] Ways [illegible] delay action by the House [illegible] tax amendment [illegible] that four other bills [illegible] the amendment [illegible] the Legislature.

What happened?

The amendment was [illegible].

Senate Ways and Means [illegible] for the purpose of taxation.

Senate Ways [illegible] Means [illegible] the affairs of [illegible] who were [illegible] permitting property to escape taxation.

* * *

Organized [illegible] bills this year.

One would have [illegible] between the ages of fourteen and sixteen years to a half day a week, requiring them to attend school [illegible] the day.

Another was an eight hour day for all women in manufacturing establishments.

The third was a six-day week for hotel employees.

The Legislature defeated the [illegible].

"Not only that, but they refused to give [illegible] a roll call on the bills," [illegible], the legislative [illegible] of the Massachusetts branch, A. F. of L.

* * *

Representative form of government, as evidenced by the 1915 Legislature, is neither [illegible] nor practical.

If the initiative and referendum were placed in the hands of the voters, the Legislature would be compelled to respond to the public will.

Lieutenant-Governor [illegible], now a candidate for Governor, was for some years Speaker of the House. He was always opposed to the initiative and referendum. He still is.

Let him speak of representative government. In a speech at Lowell last week, he was quoted by the Lowell newspapers as saying:

"We will take the Legislature and we will find at the top a sprinkling of very honest, very well informed, very able men. At the bottom we will find a few very slow and very bad men. In between is the great number, [illegible] not very bad, neither very brilliant nor very stupid, [illegible] into such a Legislature [illegible] from the control of [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] and [illegible] intelligence."

"[illegible]" [illegible] the Legislature [illegible] and if the world could be reformed by legislation it would be [illegible]."

FULL TEXT OF GREEN BOOK, SHOWING WHY ITALY DECLARED WAR

Charges Are Made That Austria Offered Territory She Did Not Own.

ROME, May 24.—The full text of the most important documents of the Italian Green Book, which constitute Italy's reasons for going to war with her former ally, Austria-Hungary, are given herewith for the first time. [illegible] important of the documents are summarized.

From these documents it will be seen that Baron Sonnino, the Italian Foreign Minister, [illegible] to Austria as early as the end of last September that public opinion in Italy, while [illegible] that the country remain neutral, would not permit the [illegible] of Italian interests in the Balkans.

They also show that at one time a separate peace between Austria-Hungary and Russia was almost consummated, but the negotiations fell through.

The [illegible] follow:

1. Baron [illegible] to the Italian Ambassador at Vienna, December [illegible]

[illegible] Austro-Hungarian [illegible] government [illegible] Article VII [illegible]

"The Austrian government [illegible]

AUSTRIAN DECLARATIONS DESCRIBED AS VAGUE.

"Italy has interests of the first order to maintain Serbia's [illegible] and economical independence and territorial integrity. It is true that the Austrian government [illegible] that it did not desire territorial [illegible] are vague and do not constitute [illegible]

[illegible] political change in the Balkan Peninsula. On the other hand [illegible] Serbia [illegible] Article VII [illegible] compensation [illegible] Austrian [illegible] advantages [illegible] territorial in the future.

URGES IMPORTANCE OF SPEEDY AGREEMENT.

"The Italian government [illegible] political and economical interests.

"There are [illegible] in Parliament and [illegible] public opinion which [illegible] the tendency of national aspirations which the Italian government is obliged to take into serious consideration. An understanding between the two governments on this basis could eliminate in future every [illegible] incidents [illegible] unfortunately frequent.

"It would be [illegible] relations of cordial [illegible] which are mutually desired, and without which any efficient agreement [illegible] sterile.

"In pointing out to Count Berchtold the friendly spirit which inspires this step, Your Excellency will also beg him to inform us with all promptness [illegible] the viewpoint of the Austrian government. SONNINO."

GERMANY INFORMED OF ITALY'S ATTITUDE.

2. Baron Sonnino to the Italian Ambassador at Berlin, December [illegible]

"I pray Your Excellency to inform Von Jagow about what I have wired the Italian ambassador to Vienna. Kindly inform the Foreign Office about the state of Italian public opinion and the close relations existing in Italy between the foreign, internal and political questions. The general tendency on the part of Italian public opinion does not mean to renounce Italian interests in the Balkans, on the Adriatic or national aspirations, but only a strong conviction that these interests and aspirations will be effectively safeguarded by remaining neutral. If the contrary should actually occur, public opinion['s] reaction would be extremely grave, with effects which it is the duty of the Italian and German governments to foresee the possibility of and to prevent. SONNINO."

VON BERCHTOLD SAYS SERBIA IS EVACUATED.

3. The Italian Ambassador at Vienna to the Foreign Minister in Rome.

December [illegible]

"I made Count von Berchtold the verbal communication ordered by Your Excellency. He said that Austro-Hungary military operations had not led to a true occupation, even temporary, of Serbian territory. The territory occupied had been evacuated a day or a few days after. In fact, the city of Valjevo, occupied fifteen days ago, was shortly afterward abandoned, owing to the successive military operations for such occupation. Article VII could not be invoked, demanding compensation. Having pointed out the Belgrade occupation which occurred several days ago, Von Berchtold repeatedly told me the troops would, perhaps, be compelled to evacuate shortly.

"I deemed it then opportune to remark to Von Berchtold that Article VII was clear and explicit, inasmuch as it contemplated exactly temporary occupation, with no provision as to the nature or length of the same. Thus, the occupation made up to date by Hungarian troops since the first day of their entrance into Serbian territory, whatever might be contemplated under the provisions of Article VII, made obligatory a previous agreement between the Austrian government and us.

"On the other hand, as I have already remarked, the very fact Serbia was invaded, even if only temporarily, entitled us to compensation; for the fact of the invasion was in itself sufficient to disturb the Balkan equilibrium established by the treaty cited, the Austrian government having, under Article III, opposed our naval operations in the Italo-Turkish war.

OCCUPATION JUSTIFIED ITALIAN COMPENSATION.

"Von Berchtold [illegible] the two operations could not be compared. Italy's contemplated operations against Turkey [illegible]

"I observed that [illegible]

"NO INTENTION TO ANNIHILATE SERBIA."

"Von Berchtold [illegible] Austria [illegible] Austria would violate Article VII of the alliance. We had made every reservation [illegible] to protect our freedom of action and safeguard our interests.

"The Italian government believes the time has arrived to recall these declarations, as Italy could not accept Austria's contention that Austria had not [illegible] occupation, even temporary, of Serbian territory. Von Berchtold replied he could not understand how Article VII could be invoked in case of a temporary occupation due to a military operation, when the invaded territory might be abandoned any day according to military events. He could not understand why such an occupation should be an object of previous agreement based on the principle of compensation.

"Notwithstanding my earnest and repeated efforts to convince Von Berchtold that this occupation necessitated an agreement [illegible] based on such a principle, he persisted in the opinion expressed above, and concluded by saying he did not believe it was time to proceed just now to an exchange of views with the Italian government on the subject. AVARNA."

BERCHTOLD REFUSES TO DISCUSS COMPENSATION.

4. This document is a telegram from Ambassador Avarna to Baron Sonnino December 13 saying that Von Berchtold refused to discuss the question of compensation, making a subtle distinction between "momentary" and "temporary" occupation. Avarna also informed Sonnino that General Frank had been appointed Governor of Belgrade.

5. Ambassador Avarna informs Baron Sonnino December 14 that owing to Von Jagow's intervention Count von Berchtold had consented to an exchange of views and to discuss compensations based on Article VII.

6. Sonnino wires to Avarna December 16 that Von Berchtold's argument surprises him; he cannot see the difference between temporary and momentary occupation caused by war operations, this distinction being contrary to the spirit and letter of Article VII, especially after the appointment of a Governor of Belgrade. Sonnino invites Avarna to remind Von Berchtold of the language and arguments used by Aehrenthal during the Italo-Turkish war, when Austria stopped Italy's operations, which did not imply occupation but simply the shelling of Salonica and Cavalla. Concluding, Sonnino said:

ITALY INSISTS THAT NEGOTIATIONS CONTINUE.

"I pray Your Excellency to insist in sustaining our viewpoint: Under Article VII an accord must precede and not be simultaneously with or follow the facts which necessitate negotiations or agreement. Your Excellency will insist that we consider the prolongation of negotiations with Vienna about interpretations of Article VII as extremely prejudicial to our interests while events are occurring which bring us face to face with accomplished facts. In your colloquy with Von Berchtold explain to him the tendencies in Parliament and public opinion and the necessity, for our mutual interest, of establishing between the two countries relations which shall be solid and lasting, based on confidence and constant friendship."

7. Avarna wires to Sonnino, December 20, that he has spoken to Berchtold, who has informed him he is ready for an exchange of views about compensations.

PRINCE VON BUELOW TAKES ITALIAN VIEW.

8. Sonnino wires to Ambassador Bollati at Berlin Avarna's views December 29, adding:

"Yesterday I received for the first time Prince von Buelow, who said he came in order to explain to Berlin our state of mind and our viewpoint at the present moment. He proposed to work to improve the good relations existing between the two countries. Before leaving Berlin he had been informed of our steps at Vienna about the discussion of Article VII of the Treaty. He had sustained with his countrymen that we had every right to demand a discussion about the compensation due us in case Austria achieved certain results. Von Buelow believed this personal opinion had had an effect in Vienna, too.

"I observed that the situation in Italy could be explained in a very few words. The majority in the country were favorable to the maintenance of neutrality and would support the government but with the understanding that we could realize some of our national aspirations. I told him that this, though difficult, was the programme of the government. Its solution implied dangerous consequences, not for the Cabinet alone, but also for the Savoy dynasty, which derives its strength from a thorough comprehension of national sentiment.

"I told him that, as he knew our country, he would soon be convinced of the truth of what I said. I also reminded Von Buelow that he had once stated in the Reichstag that the Triple Alliance was the best means of preventing war with Austria.

ALLIANCE NOT USEFUL WITH CORDIALITY LACKING.

"Prince von Buelow pointed out he had only cited Count Nigra's opinion, according to which Italy and Austria might be allies or enemies. I replied that was a little exaggerated, nevertheless partly true. I said the alliance could not be useful or fruitful if perfect cordiality were lacking; if at every step we were compelled to examine the letter of the treaty.

"It was necessary to provide for the future, even after the present war, and to place relations on a safer and more lasting base. To attain this it was necessary to remove the source of misunderstandings and frictions and to render the relations with Austria, whose existence was dispensable to Italy, as cordial and natural as those existing between Italy and Germany.

"Von Buelow thanked me for my frankness and recognized the necessity of working along this line as he wished the relations between Italy and Germany should become more cordial."

Sonnino's dispatch concluded by relating the gist of the conversation he had the day after with Macchio, who told him he knew about the verbal communication and also his government's inclination to discuss the question of compensation, notwithstanding the fact that Austria's occupation in Serbia did not fall under the provisions of Article VII. Sonnino replied that he was prompted only by the wish to improve the relations between the two countries.

9. Bollati wires Sonnino January 4 that Zimmermann fully understood the situation existing in Italy and hoped Vienna would also understand and realize the inevitable consequences. Germany had not despaired of the hope of inducing Vienna to sacrifice something to avoid the greatest of evils.

MACCHIO PROPOSES CONCESSIONS IN ALBANIA.

10. Sonnino wires Avarna January 7 that, having submitted to Macchio logical and political reasons for compensations on the based fact that "Austro-Hungary had undertaken a war whose proposed ultimate result is absolutely antagonistic to Italian interests in the Balkan peninsula," Sonnino then turned the conversation on the ground of territorial concessions, asking Macchio whether his government was ready to negotiate, adding:

"Italy would accept discussion of compensation for territories owned by other belligerents, as that would mean taking sides in the present war."

Macchio proposed concessions in Albania. Sonnino replied that Italy did not desire Albania, her interests being only to prevent the occupation by others and that it would also lead to complications with Serbia and Bulgaria.

11. Sonnino wires the Ambassadors at Vienna and Berlin January 15 that Von Buelow had informed him January 11 Germany was sending Count Wedel to Vienna to induce the Austrian Government to cede Trentino, although the Emperor and the military party would oppose the cession unceasingly for the reason that the Trentinians are good soldiers and also because the Emperor bears the title of Count Trentino.

PREFERRED WAR TO CESSION OF TRIEST.

On the same day Macchio also visited Sonnino and reproposed concessions in Albania. January 14 Von Buelow revisited Sonnino asking whether the cession of Trentino couldn't be kept secret until the end of the war. Sonnino replied that the cession of Trentino wouldn't satisfy public opinion, the cession of Triest also was necessary to remove the source of dissensions.

Von Buelow replied that Austria would prefer war to the cession of Triest, whose port was important. He stated, however, that accord was necessary.

12. Under date of January 18 Avarna informs Sonnino about his conversation with Burian, who had replaced Berchtold. Burian, after repeating the usual assurances about the integrity of Serbia, expressed that the demand for the cession of Trentino be continued and he would study the question.

13. Ambassador Bollati January 22 relates to Sonnino a conversation with Von Bethmann-Hollweg, who sincerely wished accord between Italy and Austria.

14. January 25 Sonnino wires Avarna to submit to Burian the urgent necessity to settle the preliminary question concerning concessions, especially in view of the new Austrian military expedition against Serbia.

PEOPLE ANGERED BY CONCENTRATION OF TROOPS.

15. Sonnino's Telegram to Vienna and Berlin, January 26:

"Buelow says it is impossible to reach an agreement unless Italy formulates her demands. I replied that we will not submit demands until Vienna states whether she is willing to negotiate on the ground of the cession of territories owned by her, and added that while I am doing everything possible to induce public confidence in the diplomatic action, the concentration of troops on the Serbian and Roumanian frontier angers public opinion."

16. Telegram from Avarna to Sonnino, January 28:

"I submitted to Burian a refusal to discuss compensation based on the cession of territories owned by others. Burian said it was up to Italy to formulate demands, demurred, advanced new arguments and indulged in vague conversations."

Avarna warned Burian Italy's demands required serious consideration unless grave consequences for Austria should ensue. Burian asked for time.

17-18. Sonnino wires Berlin and Vienna, February 4 he repeated that Von Buelow would formulate Italy's demands only after learning whether Burian was inclined to negotiate on the stated ground.

"Other new military expeditions are being organized in the face of this persistently dilatory system. It is impossible for us to entertain any longer hope of any practical result of the negotiations. The Italian Government, in order to protect its dignity will be compelled to withdraw every proposal to discuss the question, declaring that Italy considers every military action Austria may undertake against Serbia and Montenegro or other Balkan nation is a flagrant violation of the provisions of Article VII.

I need not point out that in case the Austro-Hungary Govern-

ROCKLAND WOMAN 72 YEARS OF AGE TELLS HOW SHE CONQUERED RHEUMATISM

Suffered Intensely for Years and Had to Use Chair in Order to Get About the House

When one reaches the age of three-score-and-ten and has suffered for years and years with rheumatism, receiving no relief from the ordinary treatments, they usually give up the idea of ever getting any better. Not so with Katherine E. Wright of 139 Market st., Rockland, Mass. She had—but let her tell her own experience.

"I am 72 years of age and haven't a sign of rheumatism and think I am as well and active as many women at 50. I couldn't always say that, for I suffered for 10 years with a severe form of rheumatism of the joints; I was in pain most of the night and my joints were so stiff I could hardly move in the morning. At one time I was obliged to support myself by leaning on a chair and by pushing this in front of me I could get about the house. My back, shoulders and hands were very painful and stiff; finally my hands became involved so that my fingers were deformed and drawn out of shape, making it impossible for me to sew or do any work.

"Some of my neighbors had rheumatism in a very bad form and told me that Var-ne-sis removed every sign of the disease. They urged me to try it anyway, as it was composed of simple vegetable ingredients, roots and barks and could do no harm. Although I didn't have any idea it would cure me, I thought I might get some relief. I obtained a bottle at the drug store and at first was not sure whether or not it helped me, but I continued the medicine for more than three months, when I was able to go about as well as ever. I appreciate what Var-ne-sis had done for me and trust my testimony will influence some other sufferer so that they may be benefited as I was."

One thousand dollars is offered if the testimonials are not genuine or that they have been purchased.

"FRAMERS OF THE CONSTITUTION OF THE U.S.A." NO. 8

The Pinckneys—"Fathers of the Republic"

PERHAPS South Carolina's best gift to this Free Republic was the splendid services of her two great sons—Charles Cotesworth Pinckney and Charles Pinckney. It can truthfully be said of the Pinckneys that their love of honor was greater than their love of power, and deeper than their love of self. One played an important part in the "Louisiana Purchase"—the other, while an envoy to France, was told that the use of money would avert war, and to this replied: "Millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." Both devoted their eminent abilities toward framing our National Law. The Constitution of the United States, as it stands to-day, was built upon the framework of a plan first proposed by Charles Pinckney. It was he who demanded that it contain freedom of religion, freedom of the press, habeas corpus and trial by jury. In political faith only did these two great men differ. Charles Pinckney was an ardent Democrat, and Charles C. Pinckney a loyal Federalist, and was twice a candidate for President. It is easy to imagine the horror that these two great lovers of Personal Liberty would have expressed if shown the proposed Prohibition Laws of to-day. It is needless to say that if alive they would VOTE NO to such tyrannous encroachments upon the NATURAL RIGHTS OF MAN. The Pinckneys both believed in the moderate use of light wines and barley brews. They also believed in legislation which encouraged the Brewing Industry because they knew that honest Barley Beer makes for true temperance. For 58 years Anheuser-Busch have been brewers of honest Barley-Malt and Saazer Hop beers—the kind the Pinckneys knew to be good for mankind. To-day their great brand—BUDWEISER—because of its quality, purity, mildness and exquisite flavor, exceeds the sale of any other beer by millions of bottles; 7500 people are daily required to keep pace with the public demand for BUDWEISER.

AUSTRIA-HUNGARY UNWILLING TO PAY PRICE DEMANDED FOR ITALY'S NEUTRALITY

Green Book Shows Austria Nearly Secured Separate Peace With Russia.

ment fails to take due notice of this declaration gravest consequences would follow, Italy declining from this moment all responsibility."

19. Sonnino asks Avarna February 7 to explain Austria's silence and begs him to see Burian, saying it is imperative to get an answer.

CABINET MEMBERS OPPOSED TO CONCESSIONS.

20. Avarna's Telegram to Sonnino, February 9:

"Burian said the question of the cession of territories had to be examined by the Austro-Hungarian Governments. Count Sturgck had told him he was strongly opposed to territorial concessions, but would, however, submit the question to the Cabinet meeting. Tisza also told him he was unfavorable to concessions.

"I told Burian it was imperative to settle the question. Burian promised to go to Budapest and discuss the question with the Hungarian Government. I explained that delay was discounting to them. Burian said Italy had to make an agreement with Austria previous to her occupation of the Aegean Islands."

21. A written statement of the preceding conversation.

22. Sonnino wires Avarna under date of February 12, explaining that Italy has good reasons for the occupation of the Aegean Islands and Avlona. Sonnino observes sorrowfully:

"Two months have elapsed since I submitted to the Austrian Government the question of Article VII. of the treaty, inviting a friendly discussion of Italy's compensation for the disturbance of the Balkan equilibrium. Although no direct refusal to negotiate has been received, weeks and months have elapsed without succeeding in getting an answer even on the question of principle, namely, whether the Austrian Government is inclined to negotiate on the ground of territorial concessions, besides which new arguments were advanced with the manifest purpose to avoid discussion on the ground proposed.

"It is useless to hope the Austrial government will never consent under present conditions to cede territory belonging to the monarchy."

BURIAN ANSWER IS AGAIN EVASIVE.

23. Avarna wires February 14 that Burian acknowledged the communication, adding that in case of new action against Serbia it would observe the conditions stipulated in Article VII.

24. Sonnino wires Avarna February 17 to explain to Burian the previous communication has the value of a veto against any other military action in the Balkans.

25. Telegram from Sonnino to Bollati, February 18:

"I received Buelow and informed him about Avarna's communication to Burian about the withdrawal of the proposal of discussions. Buelow confidentially asked whether I would accept other compensations in order to avert war. I answered him that outside of compensations destined to realize in some measure national aspirations, no negotiations were possible. Vienna believed we were bluffing. The responsibility rests with the Austrian government."

26. Sonnino wires Bollati a resume of Avarna's communication.

"USELESS TO HOPE AUSTRIA WILL CONSENT."

27. Avarna informs Sonnino under date of February 22 that he had submitted to Burian the veto of Balkan operations. Burian explained to Avarna that it was impossible to make an accord before results of the operations were actual. It was clear for obvious reasons, among which was the impossibility of determining in advance the compensations, and Avarna confuted reasons.

Burian finally admitted that discussion on the agreement could be initiated and concluded according to development of negotiations. On the question of the nature of compensation Burian remained obdurate. Avarna concluded:

28. February [illegible]—Sonnino wires Avarna that he approves his conduct.

Documents 29, 30, 31, 32, 33 and 34 are arguments sustaining the possibility of reaching an agreement in advance, in case new action against Servia and Montenegro is undertaken.

35. March 4—Sonnino to Avarna: "I also believe nothing will result in the prolongation of the discussion about territorial compensation based on Article 7. I deem it, however, useful, to sum up the following points as resulting from our past communications.

"First—No Austrian action is to begin in the Balkans without first reaching an agreement about compensation due us as per Article 7.

"Second—Every infraction of this point will be considered in open violation of the treaty, in which case Italy will resume full liberty of action to safeguard her rights and interests.

"Third—No proposal of discussion will lead to an agreement unless based on the cession of Austro-Hungarian territory.

"Fourth—That under Article 7 we are entitled to compensation for the very fact that Austria undertook military operations in the Balkans, regardless of results achieved or to be achieved, not excluding other compensations in proportion to the actual advantages Austria-Hungary may secure.

"Fifth—That compensation is due us for military action, regardless of results, and shall not be kept secret. It must be given immediately with the actual transfer of territory and occupation by Italy.

"Sixth—That we do not admit the discussion of compensation for the occupation—the Aegean Island and Avlona—for reasons already stated."

AUTHORIZED TO MAKE CONCRETE PROPOSAL.

55. March 24 Avarna informs Sonnino that Burian told him the Emperor had authorized him to make a concrete proposal.

56. March 27, "Burain called me to the Ballpalatz, saying that friendly conversations had been undertaken several months since between Italy and Austro-Hungary, with the view to consolidating their friendly relations and to eliminate every cause of dissention and friction, thus rendering possible co-operation. For the purposes of mutual interest he had induced the dual monarchy to recognize the opportunity for an agreement for whose conclusion he proposed the following basis:

"First—That Italy should engage to observe a benevolent neutral Italy, both from a politic and economic viewpoint toward Austro-Hungary, her ally, until the end of the war.

"Second—Italy should moreover, during the whole duration of the war, leave Austro-Hungary entire liberty of action in the Balkans and renounce in anticipation any new compensations whatever for territorial or other advantages which must eventually result to Austro-Hungary through such liberty of action. However this stipulation should be extended to Albania, in respect to which the existing agreement between Austro-Hungary and Italy, as well as [illegible] decisions of the London conference should remain in vigor.

"Burian then informed me that Austro-Hungary was in part [illegible] to cede territory in Southern Tyrol, including the City of Trent. For these reasons I replied that even independently of the question of more or less [illegible] execution and eventual agreement I must consider Burian's proposals too insufficient for the basis of negotiations, inasmuch as they do not sufficiently satisfy the national aspirations, do not appreciably ameliorate our military situation, nor represent adequate recompense for the liberty action left Austro-Hungary in the Balkans during the present war, which cannot but represent primary interests both political and economic for Italy."

60. April 2 Avarna wires Sonnino Burian said:

"The territory which Austro-Hungary is disposed to cede to Italy under conditions indicated would comprise the political districts of Trent, Rovereto, Riva, Tione, with the exception of Madonna and Campiglio, its environs; also the district of Borgo in the Adige Valley, confine would reach Lavis, which locality would remain in possession of Italy."

61. April 2 Bollati wires Sonnino:

"From certain signs confirmed from an unimpeachable source I believe that Germany would not refuse to negotiate peace with Russia."

62. Burian asks Avarna to submit demands to enable them to reach an agreement.

64. April 8 Sonnino wired to Avarna to submit the following proposals: First—Austro-Hungary gives Italy Trentino with the identical frontiers of the Italian Kingdom in 1811, namely, after the Treaty of Paris, February 18, the second eastern confine will be modified in favor of Italy, new territories comprising the towns of Gradisca and Goritzia. From Trogofel the new frontier line differs from the present one, turning east to Osterling, then descending from the Carnico range to Saifnitz, then from the uplands between Seisera and Scalitza border, rising to Wirschberg and subsequently following the present frontier to the Never Ridge, again descending to the base of Rombone to Isonzo, passing to the east of Plezzo, then follows the line of Isonzo to Tolmino, where it abandons Isonzo. Following the line further east and passing east of the uplands of Pregona Placina, then following the Chiapporano Valley, drops east of Goritzia, across the Carso Comen and ends on the coast between Monfalcone and Trieste near Nebresina, the third city of Trieste, with its territory, which will include Nabresina, so to fit with the new Italian frontier south, and comprising the present judiciary district of Capodistria. Pirano will be erected in an autonomous independent State in so far as all political, international, military, legislative and financial administrative matters are concerned, Austro-Hungary renouncing all its rights of sovereignty. It must remain a free port, neither Austro-Hungarian nor Italian troops will be allowed.

"Trieste will assume a fraction of the present Austro-Hungary public debt corresponding to its population.

"Fourth—Austro-Hungary turns over to Italy Curzolar Islands, including Lissa, with the neighboring islets, Santandrea Busi, Lesina, with Spalmadori, Turcola, Curzola, Lagosta, with its neighboring rocks and islets Cazza, Meleda and, besides, Pelagosa.

IMMEDIATE OCCUPATION IS PROVIDED FOR.

"Fifth—Italy will immediately occupy the territories ceded. Trieste and its territory will be evacuated by the Austro-Hungarian troops and authorities with immediate dismissal from land and sea the forces recruited in all ceded territory.

"Sixth—Austro-Hungary recognizes the full sovereignty of Italy over Valona and its bay, including Sasseno, with sufficient hinterland as required for their defence. Austro-Hungary disinterests herself completely from Albania as comprised within the confines assigned by the London conference.

"Eighth—Austro-Hungary will grant complete amnesty, immediate release of all persons condemned or prosecuted for military or political crimes belonging to the ceded territory.

"Ninth—Italy will pay Austro-Hungary two hundred million Italian lire for exemption of all ceded territory from a share of obligation to the Austro-Hungarian [illegible] debts [illegible] in compensation [illegible] to the Italian [illegible] of State property with the exception of areas which exists in the abovenamed territory, in compensation for all State rights concerning the said territories in so far as they be connected with them both for the present and future without any exception whatsoever.

"Tenth—Italy engages herself to maintain perfect neutrality during the present war toward Austro-Hungary and Germany.

"Eleventh—During the present war Italy renounces Austro-Hungary and likewise gives up all claims regarding Italian occupation of the Aegean Islands."

65. Avarna informs Sonnino [illegible] of a counter proposal submitted by Burian with a request for prompt consideration.

66. April 19 [illegible] Italian Minister [illegible] at [illegible], wired Sonnino:

"According to confidential information separate peace between Austro-Hungary and Russia is possible."

67. Sonnino wires Avarna:

"It is imperative Your Excellency hasten a reply to our demands."

68. [illegible] Italian Minister at Sophia, wired Sonnino:

"There are current reports for [illegible] separate peace between Austria and Serbia. Vienna [illegible] peace with Russia in order to be ready to face Italy."

70. Bollati wires Sonnino April [illegible]:

"Rumors of separate peace between Austria and Russia [illegible] circulating. It seems probable."

BURIAN REPEATED CESSION PROPOSAL.

71. April 18 Avarna wires Sonnino:

[illegible]

72. [illegible] Sonnino wires Avarna:

"I have examined [illegible] concerning the concessions Austro-Hungary is disposed to make. I regret to state they do not appear to me such as to [illegible] [illegible] Only [illegible] [illegible] point. To all our other proposals Burian opposes a flat refusal.

[illegible]

"Also in regard to [illegible] [illegible] Italian government [illegible] guaranteeing the [illegible] execution [illegible] till the end of the war.

"On the other hand, Burian [illegible] has often [illegible] [illegible] Austro-Hungary and Germany [illegible] their demands [illegible] in the event of [illegible] [illegible] by the Italian government, many other [illegible] questions would require settlement, as, for instance, the creation in Triest of an autonomous state, the cession of the Curzolari Islands and disinterestment of the monarchy in Albania [illegible] we make [illegible] of Burian's intentions [illegible] pressed to see it [illegible] but if the Austrian government will ever give [illegible].

"If, however, [illegible] government [illegible] our requests [illegible] even in this particular, [illegible] discussion [illegible] quickly, there remains always the important question of [illegible] agreement. [illegible] regarded by us as indispensable in the agreement [illegible] Burian's decided opposition. For [illegible] agreement with Austro-Hungary [illegible] Your Excellency to [illegible]."

Then follows a long telegram from Avarna reporting an interview with Burian from which it emerges that except for a few modifications, Burian persists in opposing a negative reply to Italian demands contained in articles one, two, three, four and five.

TREATY BROKEN BY ACTION OF SERBIA.

On May 3 [illegible] Sonnino wired Avarna:

"I beg Your Excellency to inform Burian the following communication, of which you will give him a written copy:

"The alliance between Italy and Austro-Hungary [illegible]

[illegible]

"Notwithstanding this [illegible] persevered [illegible] several months in [illegible] favorable for reestablishment of those friendly relations between the two States which constitute an essential [illegible]

BOTH MOTHER AND DAUGHTER HAPPY

Mrs. L. B. Clark, of 39 Lynde St. Relates How She and Her Mother Were Benefited.

The Liggett Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where Plant Juice, the new herbal system tonic is being introduced, has presented a scene of unusual activity for the past few days. Many people are calling out of gratitude to thank the Plant Juice man for what his remedy has done for them. The following statement was made by Mrs. L. B. Clark, who resides at No. 39 Lynde Street, who is a prominent church member, and is a well-known lady, having lived in Boston for 40 years. She stated:

"I had dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach trouble for years; after eating I would bloat and belch gas, and felt a hard lump in the pit of my stomach. I suffered considerable pain, also had pains in my back and shoulders, palpitation of the heart, fluttering, etc. I had that tired-out feeling all of the time. I had doctored for my ailments, but did not seem to get any relief. I finally tried Plant Juice, and can now truthfully say that I feel like a new woman. My mother, who is 58 years of age, has also taken Plant Juice, her ailments being about the same as mine, and it has helped her. We have both taken the remedy for two weeks, and we are both feeling fine, and are recommending Plant Juice to all of our friends."

The Plant Juice man is at the Liggett's Drug Store, corner of Washington and Avon streets, where he daily meets the local public and introduces and explains the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.—Advertisement.

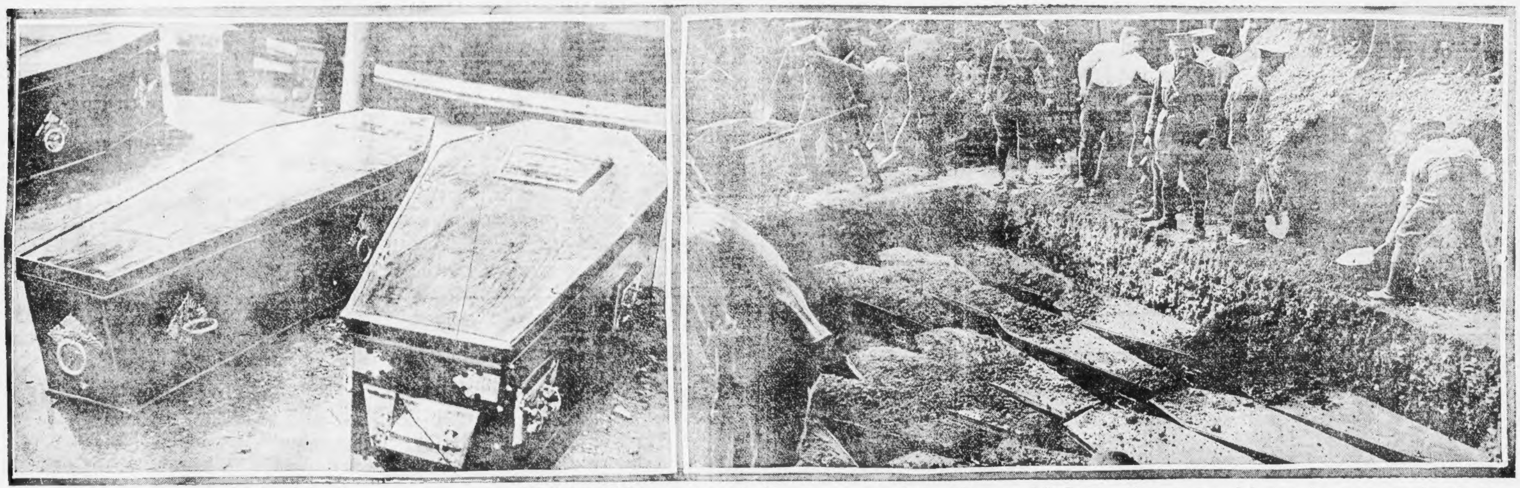
FIRST PHOTOGRAPHS OF LUSITANIA VICTIMS AND SURVIVORS

Photographs Copyrighted 1915 by the International News Service.

On the left is Mr. Cowper, a Canadian journalist, and little Helen Smith, a six-year-old American girl, who lost her father and mother. Photograph on the right shows survivors at the Duston station in London. The man carrying the bundle is Mr. Jeffrey of the Jeffrey Motor Company.

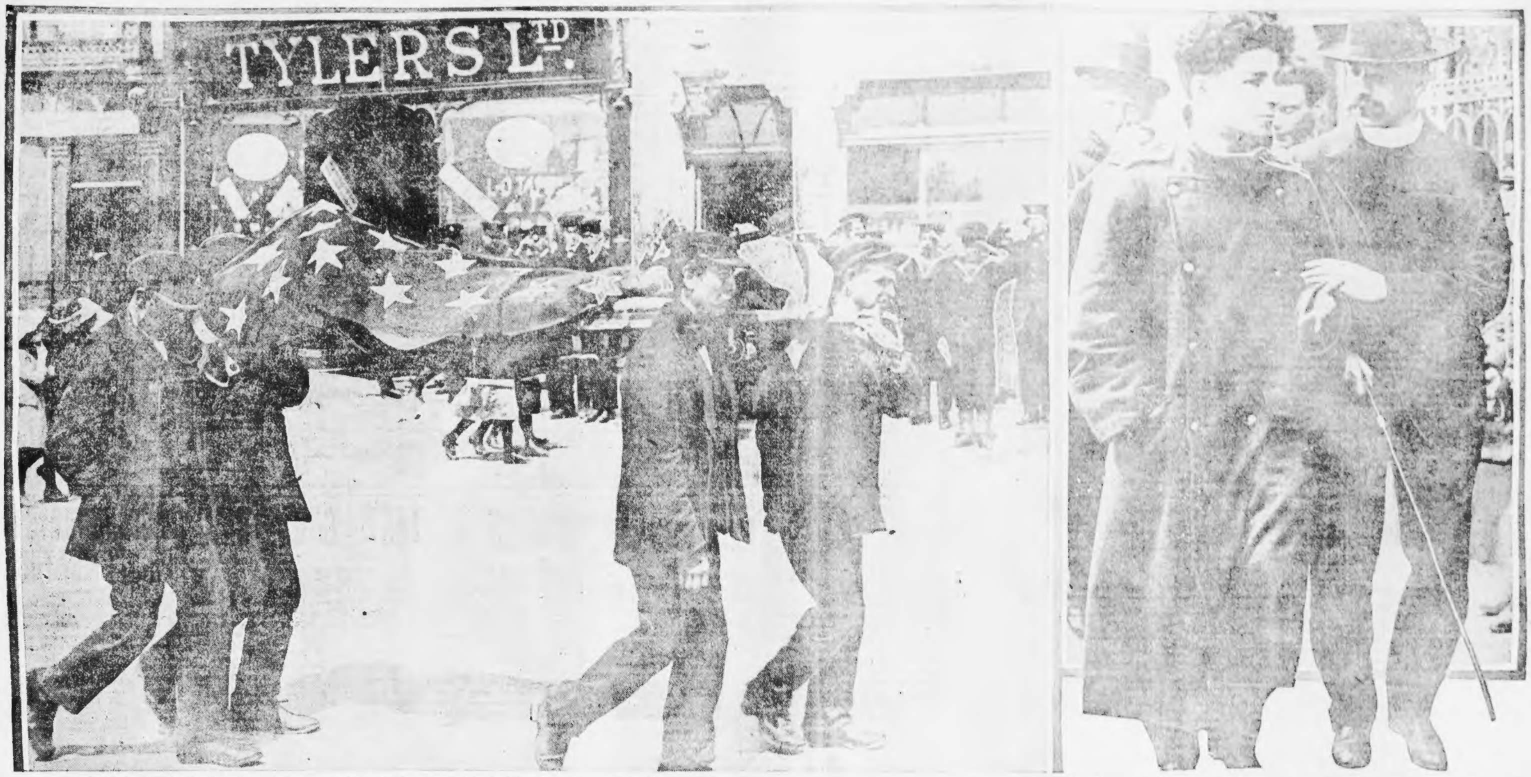


The coffin of T. B. King of New York, side by side with that of an unidentified victim, which later went into the big common grave. At the right, some of the British soldiers who formed the funeral escort are seen shoveling the soil of Ireland upon the sixty-six coffins, which lie in two layers.

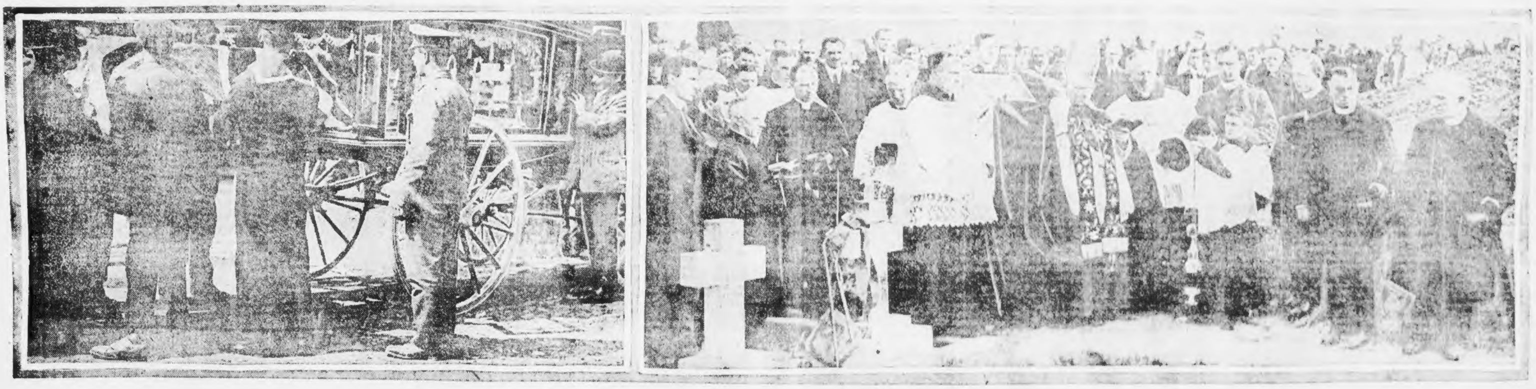
Survivors coming ashore at Queenstown, weak and broken after their terrible experience. Soldiers and townspeople conspired to make them comfortable. At the right are two women survivors driving away from the Euston station, London. Like many of the other poor people, they are wearing borrowed clothing, in this case two greatcoats which had been furnished by army officers.

GRAPHIC PICTURES ILLUSTRATING THE GREAT SEA TRAGEDY

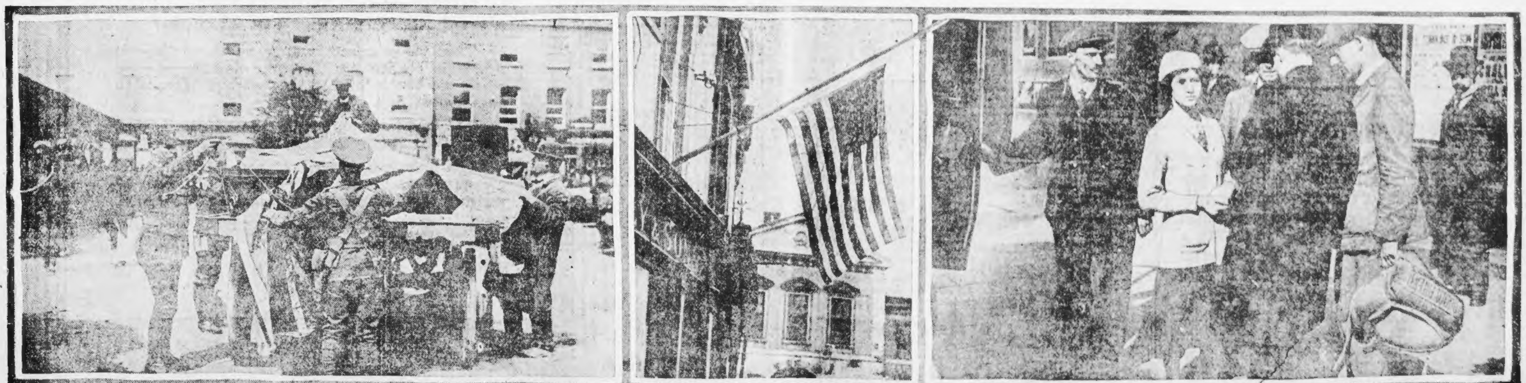
Photographs Copyrighted 1915 by the International News Service



At the left is shown the body of an American who lost his life on the Lusitania, being carried through the city streets to the temporary morgue, reverently hidden beneath the Stars and Stripes. The other photograph shows a clergyman aiding one of the survivors, who has been supplied with an officer's coat in lieu of his own, lost when the liner went down.



At the left, the coffins are being carried from the Queenstown Morgue to the hearses. At the right is the scene at the big grave when the Most Rev. Robert Browne, Bishop of Cloyne, read the Catholic burial service. The Episcopalian service followed, and finally the Non-Conformist rites were performed.



At left, British soldiers covering coffins of victims with the Union Jack just before the journey to the cemetery. Next, the Stars and Stripes floating at half-mast over the American consulate while the funeral was in progress. At the right, little Miss Kathleen Kaye, the girl who helped row a lifeboat in which she was rescued, and H. G. Colebrook, holding the life-belt that kept him afloat several hours till rescue came. He retains the belt as a souvenir.

"The Rabbit's" Column

By Walter J. Maranville

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

Now that Joe Wood has staged a come-back, interest will centre in a similar effort by Ed. Walsh, who did for the Sox in 1907 what Wood did for Boston in 1912. Walsh has returned from California to Chicago, and claims that his arm is as well as ever, and that he will show this as soon as he has had a chance to do a little work, to get into general condition. Rowland will not hurry his try-out, as he doesn't need a pitcher right now.

* * *

If Walsh can show, Chicago's pennant hopes will be vastly improved. The big fellow doesn't need to be able to stand the strain of nine innings. As a finisher of games for wabbling hurlers he would be invaluable. In this line Walsh is the greatest pitcher in the American League has had, if not of all time. He was, in his day, the one man who could warm up on half a dozen pitched balls, and go in fully prepared to stop a rally.

* * *

What is the secret of the success of the New York Highlanders? The answer is: First-class pitching. Bill Donovan's twirling staff has been making a wonderful showing this Spring. So well have the pitchers performed that not once in the first twenty-four games played by the club was one of Donovan's men knocked off the rubber. Such a showing is certainly remarkable. It looks very much as though it was a record for the major leagues, especially in the first month of the season, when pitchers are likely to have less control than they do later in the campaign.

* * *

An after-supper baseball league is going to be formed in Detroit. The scheme was proposed as the result of the city having adopted Eastern time. This gives Detroiters an hour more of daylight at the end of the day. The majority of the shops in Detroit shut down at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon. This would give the players a chance to go home wash up, get their supper and go to the ball game before darkness sets in.

It is claimed that with the change of an hour in the time at Detroit that it will be light enough to play there at 9:30 o'clock in the evening. Several clubs have been invited to join the organization and the scheme will be tried out in a few weeks.

* * *

George McQuillan, it will be remembered, broke away from training rules and managerial orders much like Douglass—and was finally released, without even a string attached to him. This gave him a jolt which brought him right-about-face with a vengeance. Finding himself outside the big league and the big money, McQuillan proceeded to behave splendidly, get himself into ideal condition, pitch great ball, and return to the major league—with a different ball club. 'Twould be rather annoying for Cincinnati, wouldn't it, if this Douglass did the same?

RED SOX BATTLE ST. LOUIS TODAY

ST. LOUIS, May 24.—The Red Sox reached here early today to tackle the Browns in the final series in the West and following the most disastrous stand that they have made since coming to this territory. They were beaten 4 to 2 in the final at Chicago, which means that they dropped three in a row to the White Sox and boosted them to first place in this hectic pennant struggle in the American League.

The men of Carrigan will have to get a hustle on and win the majority of the four to be played here if they are to have anything like a successful trip on this first Western invasion. With that end in view Manager Carrigan told Mays to be ready to go against the Browns.

GARDNER NOT WITH SOX.

Gardner, the third baseman, hasn't joined the team, and the news is that he will wait until the Red Sox have finished their tour of the West and that he will be with his pals when Philadelphia is reached.

Which announcement has made no hit with the manager. The big weakness in Chicago was the third base position, and had the Boston lads possessed their regular they might have won yesterday's game.

Janvrin didn't begin to cover the ground in that vicinity that Gardner does, and balls that were hit through him for base hits would have been stabbed by Gardner.

The latter's failure to report has made it necessary for Carrigan to constantly shift his lineup, and you can't get far when you have a bunch of men playing different positions every day.

Dick Hoblitzell's injury is not as serious as at first suspected and he will probably be in the lineup before this invasion is over. It was his bad ankle which was injured again and a couple of days of nursing and rest will fix it all right.

WOOD PITCHED CARELESSLY.

Joe Wood was a sorrowful athlete today and he should have been, for it was his carelessness which probably lost the Red Sox their final in Chicago. Wood, trying to hand Ray Schalk an intentional pass, pitched the ball where the Sox catcher could reach it, and the result was a base hit and a run for Chicago.

The play came up in the fourth and with two gone. Brief was standing on second with Schalk up. Wood thought it baseball to pass the catcher and pitch to Scott. Well, the first ball was all right, but the next one wasn't out far enough. It was absolutely without a thing on it, and Schalk reached out and drove it to centre for a clean single. Brief naturally scored. That gave the Chicago team a two-run lead and the Red Sox thereafter were compelled to fight for a bunch of runs instead of one.

Johnny Evers to Join Braves Today

Captain Johnny Evers of the Braves will make his reappearance at Fenway Park this afternoon, and when he takes a position on the coaching lines he is sure to receive a great reception. It will be fully two more weeks before Evers will play ball, but his appearance on the lines should help greatly.

BRAVES IN LAST CUBS GAME

The Braves will make an effort this afternoon to take at least one game from the Chicago Cubs. Bresnahan and his band of pennant chasers have defeated the Champions three games in a row and are anxious to grab off another victory today.

The Chicago outfit has played hard, fast baseball since it arrived in this man's town. It has outplayed the Braves in most departments of the national pastime. There has not been anything lucky about the Cubs' three victories. In Friday's tussle Joe Connolly dropped a fly ball, and this played a prominent part in giving Chicago a win. Bresnahan's men, however, were alert at all stages of that contest and made the most of each of the Braves' slipups.

Stallings' band has been playing a poor grade of baseball lately. The pitchers have not been going very well, while the players have not been "hitting 'em wher they ain't," as Willie Keller used to say.

The Braves, of course, have missed Johnny Evers a great deal. He was usually the centre of their attack, while his dazzling work at second base and ability to size up a situation quickly halted many a rally.

Evers put the finshing punch to the work of the Braves. When he gets back into the game the team will probably play better ball, provided the pitchers also show something in the way of high-class hurling.

Larry Cheney will probably pitch for Chicago today, while Bill James may perform on the hill for the clan of Stallings.

Ball Player Dies.

HARRISBURG, Pa., May 24.—Guy W. Ommert, member of a local amateur baseball team, had his skull fractured by a pitched ball in a game at Palmyra and died at a hospital here. He was seventeen years old.

HARVARD PLAYS PRINCETON TODAY

PRINCETON, N. J., May 24.—Harvard and Princeton will today play off the game which was postponed on account of rain last Saturday. The heavy downpour Saturday caused the Crimson and Tigers to call off the hostilities last Saturday. Harvard was on hand and anxious to play but it was impossible and Coach P. D. Haughton took his charges back to New York.

The Harvard squad arrived here this morning and are anxiously waiting the call to play. The boys spent a quiet Sunday in New York, passing the greater portion of the day sightseeing and at the Harvard.

Although Coach Haughton still claims that he will sent Eddie Mahan to the mound this afternoon, there is a rumor around town today that Bill Clarke is likely to spring his annual surprise on Harvard by substituting Chaplin for Deyo.

A Matter of Choice

If a man were starving in the wilds of Africa, he would take any food offered him and be grateful. But in Civilized Communities, where he has several offerings, a man likes to choose the best because he has a right to do so. In ales, you have several from which you can choose. One is sure to give you satisfaction in every way. Then why not make your choice

Bad Measuring Costs Ed Renz Big Record

NEW YORK, May 24.—An irregular track has caused another world's record to be disregarded by the A. A. U. Edward Renz of the Mohawk Athletic Club broke the five-mile outdoor record at the annual carnival of the Walkers' Club of America at McCombs Dam Park, Saturday, but the distance proved to be short. Renz was timed in 37 minutes 43 seconds, which obliterated the old mark of 38 minutes 2 seconds made by William H. Purdy thirty-five years ago.

The track is not measured according to the International Federation Union rule of twelve inches from the border, which made the distance some eighteen yards short. Had Renz walked over the full distance he would have undoubtedly been within the old record.

HARVARD CREW HAS DAY OF REST

The Harvard varsity crew will lay off today as a reward for the defeat of Cornell Saturday, but with the race against Yale but a month away, all hands will report at the Newell Boat House tomorrow to prepare in all earnest for the four-mile row with the Elis which is the objective point of the Harvard season.

Coach Wray on his arrival from Ithaca was bubbling over with good things to say about the eight that gave him his first victory over his most feared rival "Pa" Courtney on Saturday. He left town immediately for Framingham, where he will stay until tomorrow, resting after the great strain incumbent on watching his charges go through the heart-breaking races Saturday and, although his Freshman eight lost after a hard tussle, he is still confident that the youngsters have the stuff and, with a proper shaking up, will come back good and strong and trounce the Eli first year men.

Nothing but the greatest praise is being given the Harvard eight for its fine showing, but Chick Lund, the Boston boy, who stroked the Henley crew, as well as Saturday's victory, is coming in for the lion share of the credit. He set a stroke that was bound to keep his crew in the van and enabled them to hold the advantage they gained early in the race right up to the finish.

But little money changed hands on the varsity race as the Cornellians sought odds, but the supporters of the Freshmen lost quite a bit of change on the chances of their crew.

Callahan Said to Have Purchased Ball Club

CHICAGO, May 24.—A report which could not be verified, but which was current in this city that Jimmy Callahan, erstwhile manager of the White Sox, has purchased the Kansas City A. A. club.

Charley Comiskey, it is understood, is Callahan's silent partner. Jimmy will manager the team, according to the reports.

Fred Merkle Receives Broken Nose in Game

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., May 24.—Fred Merkle, first baseman of the Giants, was hit by a thrown ball during an exhibition game between New York and Perth Amboy here and his nose was broken. The injury will probably keep him out of the game for several weeks. The Giants won, 3 to 0.

Davis Is Released from the Hospital

George Davis, the star Braves' pitcher, who will join the team on June 5, has been released from the Stillman Infirmary, Harvard, where he was taken early last week, supposed to be suffering from appendicitis. The supposition proved false, however, and the young pitcher has been declared fit by the physicians.

Boston Tennis Stars Win N. Y. Matches

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., May 24.—N. W. Niles and A. S. Dabney of the Longwood Cricket Club, Boston, defeated T. R. Pell and B. S. Prentice of New York in the final round robin invitation tennis tournament at Tuxedo after a very exciting four-set match, winning three sets to one.

Mayor Refuses Welsh-Saylor Fight Permit

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 24.—The Freddie Welsh-Milburn Saylor bout scheduled for next Friday night, the eve of the big 500-mile auto race, has been given a solar plexus punch by Mayor Bell.

The Mayor declared no permit would be granted for the fight. The George Chip-Jack Dillon bout for the afternoon of the same day also must be declared off.

It is understood the Welsh-Saylor bout was to have been allowed, but when a permit was refused for the Dillon-Chip match the trouble among the promoters resulted in the ruling against both affairs by the City Administration.

Columbia Stars in Title Games

NEW YORK, May 24.—Coach Wefers will send a strong Columbia delegation to the intercollegiate champs at Philadelphia next Saturday. Russ Beatty, the titleholder in the shot-put, is a sure entry in the weight events, together with Duke Olmsted, who has shown considerable ability in the hammer throw.

WHITE AND YELLE CLASH TOMORROW

By JACK CONWAY

CHARLEY WHITE, master of a famous left hook and a couple of dozen other sleep-producing punches, is scheduled to arrive in our fair town today. Be it known that Charles is to meet Fred Yelle of Taunton in a twelve-round skirmish which will be staged before the Atlas A. A. tomorrow night.

White does not need any introduction, as he is well known to Boston's fistic lovers. He made his first appearance in a local ring against Eddie Murphy a few weeks ago and scored with a knockout punch in the seventh frame.

There are few lightweights who have anything on the Windy City youth. He possesses plenty of class and would not lack backing if he were to be pitted against Freddy Welsh in a twenty-round battle.

WHITE is a finished performer. He knows the ring game from every angle. He does not go through any useless motions when he is in the ring. He moves around the ring in a business-like manner. He studies every move of his opponent and when he sees an opening he is very quick to take advantage of it.

The Chicago boxer has gained most of his success as a result of his punching ability. He has experienced much trouble when pitted against skillful glove men like Jimmy Duffy, Freddy Welsh, Johnny Griffiths and Pal Moore.

YELLE will today complete his training for his tussle with White. The Taunton favorite has been training steadily for the past two weeks and is in grand condition for the fray. Eddie Moore's protege does not intend to fight White at close quarters. He plans to box at long range and outpoint the Windy City lightweight. White has always experienced trouble when opposed by a boxer with a sharp left jab which landed with a resounding thud. Yelle is blessed with such a punch and should cause White a good deal of trouble. If Yelle makes a good showing against White he will be in a position to demand matches with the leading lightweights in the country.

THERE will also be an attractive preliminary card at the Atlas Club tomorrow night. Walter Butler of Beachmont and Larry Burns, the Lawrence lightweight, will furnish the festivities in the semi-final contest of eight rounds. Both boys are rugged boxers and hard punchers and should furnish an interesting whirl. The opening six-round bout will bring together Joe Sousa, who hails from Cambridge, and Steve Travers of Biddeford, Me. The other six-round encounter will be between Walter Watts, the aggressive Providence boxer, and Cy Goodwin of this man's town.

WILLIE RITCHIE, the American lightweight champion, will not engage in another bout before September. Ritchie may then be signed to meet one of the local lightweights in a "go" to be staged before the Atlas A. A. The 'Frisco boy is planning to return to California and will remain there until September. Willie is anxious to take in the sights of the Exposition and also to attend to some business affairs which he has in California.

MIKE GLOVER, the clever South Boston welterweight, has already started to prepare himself for his twelve-round tussle with Matt Wells which will take place at the Arena a week from tomorrow night.

Coast Team Manager Offered Indian Job

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 24.—Walter McCredie, manager of the Portland team of the Pacific Coast League said he had received "indirectly" a proposition to manage the Cleveland American League team.

"I am undecided," he added when asked if he would accept.

GEORGE WILEY TO RACE DIDIER

With George Wiley showing his present great form, the 25-mile motor-paced race at the Revere Cycle Track next Saturday night assumes huge proportions in the matter of interest. Wiley's opponents in this contest will be Leon Didier, the "flying Frenchman," and Elmer Collins, the Lynn boy, who seems to be back to stay for some time to come.

Ever since Didier swept everything before him in his wonderful series of victories at the beach oval last summer, the "fans" have longed for the day when Wiley would be able to meet the Frenchman with all things even. Now it appears as if that day has come.

It is true that Wiley met Didier on numerous occasions last year, but it was only his courage that carried him through, for he had practically nothing else. He entered nearly every race with some injury or another. His hard luck began at the start and lasted right through the season. Now, however, things are different. Wiley has had the benefit of a long rest during the Winter, and those who saw him race at Revere Saturday night will vouch for his form. For Wiley never was in better condition.

His work so far this spring as compared with that of last season is a revelation. Even Didier admitted that Wiley is going to be a hard man to beat. Consequently the great French rider is leaving no stone unturned in order to be in the pink of condition. He wants to be at his best when he meets Wiley this time.

Didier is in good trim. He showed that in his contest with Collins and Walthour a week ago last Saturday. And Collins was not far behind in the matter of condition. Collins is riding as good as he ever did at the present time. All things considered, it looks as though the "fans" are in for a great contest.

Manager Butler has arranged another special tandem race for next Saturday night to be run in addition to the motor-paced race and the regular list of amateur and professional events.

Sports in England in Moribund State

LONDON, May 24.—With no county cricket games to be played this Summer, all lawn tennis tournaments, golf championships, the principal athletic meeting cancelled, and horse racing meets, with the exception of Newmarket, abandoned during the continuation of the war, sport throughout the British Isles has reached the lowest ebb on record.

At the recent meeting of the Marylebone Cricket Club, the governing body of county cricket, Lord Hawke gave out that no fewer than 112 members had gone on active service, 69 of whom had been killed in action.

McAllister Decides to Quit Ring Game

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 24.—Bob McAllister, the local middleweight who has been in New York for the past six months, returned home looking in good health, but with little enthusiasm for the ring.

Bob has not fully decided upon his future movements, but says he will likely abandon the ring and go into business in San Francisco with his brother, Al.

Fordham May Row in Poughkeepsie Race

NEW YORK, May 24.—Jack Mulcahy, coach of the Fordham crew, announces that if the freshman crew made a good showing in the New York Rowing Association regatta on the Harlem River on Monday, May 31, the crew will be sent to Poughkeepsie to row in the big event on the Hudson River in June.

Fordham has been assured that it will be welcome at Poughkeepsie, and in that regatta it will meet the freshman eights from Columbia, Cornell, Syracuse and Pennsylvania.

Buffalo Feds May Be Shifted, Is Report

BUFFALO, May 24.—There is a report in circulation here that the Buffalo Federal League Club may be shifted to some other city because of poor patronage. The salary list is said to call for the payment of more than $70,000, which is more than the local promoters are to pay unless the game can be made more profitable.

BUT Tommy stopped short with a kind of jerk, as a tethered animal stops when it comes to the end of its rope; for he saw clearly, and all in a moment that it was not a woman who invited him share the shelter of the hut, but a little child. He stopped short then and smiled as a boy smiles.

"Not room enough for two in there," he said. "But if you get frightened or want anything, just call. I'll hear. And—good night."

It seemed darker when she had closed the door of the hut and no longer gleamed in the fire light. Professor Stilliter lowered his rifle with a suppressed sigh of relief and sank down among the bushes. And when Tommy, healthfully tired, had fallen into a sound sleep he withdrew to a distance with his followers, and passed a night of supreme discomfort upon the hard ground. Celestia was safe in Tommy's care, and there was no use separating them before morning.

Celestia dreamed all night, not of that heaven from which she had so recently come, not of the wicked world she was to save, but of Tommy. Dreaming, it seemed likely she was neither a child, nor mad, nor a goddess, but a young woman whose imagination had been strongly worked upon by a young man.

Bright and early she waked and stepped from the hut into the cold, still Adirondack dawn. Tommy, his feet to the fire that had almost died, still slept.

She knelt by him and studied his face at leisure. Presently she touched his hand cautiously with the tip of her finger and found that it was cold. Then, happy as a child to be of service, she put wood on the fire and blew the embers into flame. Still Tommy did not wake, and she knelt by him once more and, with a laugh, bowed her lovely head and kissed him.

Tommy was dreaming of her. She had promised to marry him as soon as he had killed the horrible dragon that lived under the hill. Tommy, after a desperate battle, in which he was armed with only a can opener, had just succeeded in opening the dragon's jugular vein, and was just rushing out from the hill to claim his reward from the waiting Celestia, when she really kissed him, and he waked, and knew that he had been kissed.

His very first words were of reproof.

"Celestia, dear," he said, "you mustn't do that."

"Mustn't kiss you?"

"Of course not."

Her great eyes assumed an injured look.

"In heaven," she said, "an angel always wakes me with a kiss."

Tommy was wide awake now.

"What kind of an angel?" he inquired with a kind of cold suspicion in his voice.

"Oh," she said carelessly, "any one that happened to pass by, and thought that I had slept long enough. But then Celestia liked to be kissed. Don't humans?"

"Yes," said Tommy, "sometimes. I liked it. Only among us it's a sacred sort of thing, and grown-up humans reserve their kisses for celestial moods, or for children, who are always rather heavenly." As he spoke he began to prepare breakfast, and Celestia smiled upon him, but not as if she was very much interested in what he had said, or indeed understood it. Suddenly she said:

"I want to cook."

"You do, do you? Do you know how?"

"I've watched you."

Tommy rose with a laugh.

"Then you shall," he said, "and I'll have a swim to wake me up."

"A swim?"

"You do it in the water," said Tommy gravely, and he made swimming motions with his arms.

"Oh, but I'd rather swim, too, than cook," said Celestia, and she prepared to follow him. But Tommy shook his head.

"Somebody has to cook," he said, "and I was the first to think about swimming and so it would be selfish of you"——

"You were nicer to me yesterday," said Celestia, and she turned with a little cry of astonishment to the kettle, which had just boiled over.

Tommy hurried away chuckling, and just before he came to the Norrow Island Beach he stripped and hung his clothes on a tree limb, and then he swung his arms about wildly like a cab driver, and leaped and ran up and down to get his circulation going, and then with an athlete's scorn of pain and cold, he ran into the water until it was waist deep, and then dove.

Celestia, busy with the cooking, was not troubling her mind about celestial affairs. She felt very earthly. She felt as any young girl would have felt in such novel and romantic circumstances. And much that had been clear to her the previous day and of surpassing importance seemed now dim and futile, so that a few more days of life in the open, far from the occult influences and directions of Professor Stilliter, might have made a normal person of her.

The reason that Tommy could not understand Celestia was simple. She could not explain herself. She believed beyond question that she had always lived in Heaven until the day before, when after a glorious rush through space she found herself on earth, seated by a pool of water and looking into the eyes of Tommy Barclay.

Do you ever dream? Then you know how real the most preposterous dream can seem, at the time, and for a while after you wake. Suppose you dreamed that you were perfectly happy? You could not afterward describe just what that had felt like, any more than you can describe the magical transitions of dreams nor the spelling scenery which so often accompanies a nightmare.

A Man and His Wife

Duval Tries to Act as Sympathizer to the Sorrowful Isabel

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

CHAPTER L.

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

THE night air felt cool and refreshing upon Isabel Hamilton's flushed face as she and Duval drove home side by side. At her suggestion her companion opened both windows of the cab.

"Oh," she sighed. "I am so glad to get out of those hot rooms!" She pressed her hands over her eyes.

"The night is so lovely," the man said, seeming to ignore her emotion. "Do you mind if we go home by a roundabout way—that is, take a little turn up along the river? The moon is wonderful just now."

She shook her head, her hands still pressed to her eyes. "I don't care," she muttered, "where I go or what becomes of me."

Duval leaned forward and gave his orders to the driver before he made any reply to her exclamation of desperation. Then he said gently:

"Dear lady—words are poor things with which to express what one feels—but I'm fearfully sorry that you're unhappy."

She withdrew her hands from her eyes and tried to smile. "I'm a fool, that's all!" she declared abruptly.

But her voice broke, and she bit her lips to keep back the tears. Duval laid his hand on her quivering fingers.

"Poor child!" he said sympathetically. "You are worn out, that's all. You're up against a tough proposition, and, after all, you're only a girl—and you've put up a fine fight."

DUVAL TRIES TO COMFORT THE DISTRESSED WIFE.

His tone of understanding compassion was too much for her and, dropping her face into her hands, she burst into tears. He let her sob in silence for a minute, then drew her head down upon his broad shoulder.

"There, there!" he said soothingly, as a man might try to quiet his little sister. "Cry it out, dear. It will do you good."

She did cry out, her frame shaken by sobs that she did not strive to control. When the storm had spent itself, she sat up and made a futile effort to laugh.

"I'm ashamed of myself," she apologized. "I have not cried like that before in months—and never where anybody saw me. Please forgive me. I don't know what you must think of me!"

"May I tell you, Isabel?" he whispered.

"Oh, no!" she said. "Don't tell me anything that you may regret later. You don't know me, nor how silly I am. But you are my friend. I am sure of that. And, as my friend, perhaps you will let me tell you just what happened tonight."

"Yes, child, tell me," he said.

She told him a great deal—not only Adelaide's remarks to her over the telephone, but what she had heard Adelaide say to John. She also went back to the episode of the roses, to the incident of the telephone message that John had pretended was on business but which had really been from Adelaide Simmons. And through all the story ran the thread of her own love for her husband, her desire to trust him, her suffering.

She said nothing of her own faults or failings—merely because she did not think of them at this juncture. Nor did she tell of her financial difficulties. Something held her back from talk of this. Somehow it seemed sordid to bring money matters into conversation with a man who was not related to her.

HE IS NOT CARRIED AWAY, BUT VERY DEFERENTIAL.

Whatever may have been the emotion that stirred the depths of David Duval's being, it showed itself in a deferential manner and a gentleness that would have won a happier and less soft-hearted woman than his companion.

"You have honored me, dear," he said softly, when her recital was ended. "Perhaps it may have been your loneliness that made you trust me with this intimate story. It may have been—I wish it were—because you care enough for my friendship to find comfort in telling me of your troubles."

"Oh, it is a comfort!" she exclaimed. "I'm afraid I'm very weak and that I may have done wrong in talking to you of all this—but it has helped me to tell it to someone who—understands."

"Change that last word, child," he begged.

"'That last word'!" she repeated. "What last word?"

"That word 'understands.' Change it to 'cares.' For I do care very deeply, dear Isabel. Remember that—unless it troubles you to remember it. I will not try to tell you of what I feel now, but your woman's instinct can make you guess. Some time, when you have decided what you are going to do, you will remember that I am thinking of you, dear—that I am waiting for you to let me come and tell you how much"——

"Oh, no!" she exclaimed, throwing out her hands as if to ward off something she feared. Then she added, falteringly, "Forgive me, please. I am afraid to think just now."

The cab had turned into the street on which she lived. There was but a moment more. She was not sorry that this was so. Yet she did not shrink when David Duval lifted her hand to his lips.

"Don't think until you are ready to do so, dear," he said.

Almost before she could appreciate his meaning he had let her into the house and had gone his way. This time he did not escort her upstairs to the door of her apartment.

To Make Your Figure Slim and Attractive

If you are one of the many who suffer from obesity you know only too well the embarrassment and discomfort one suffers when they are too fat. The cause of obesity is undoubtedly due to faulty assimilation. Too much of your food is turned into fat and too little into strength and vitality. The surest [illegible] is to get from any good druggist a box of oil of korein capsules and take one after each meal and one before retiring at night. They cost little, act quickly, are pleasant to take and are perfectly safe. After [illegible] weigh yourself once a week and do [illegible] until you are down to normal.

This is such a simple, safe and reliable way to reduce one's weight that it readily appeals to everyone burdened with superfluous fat.

Zoe---The Story of a Great Love

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN.

"YES, but I don't," said Crawley, promptly.

"It isn't a question of a bargain," insinuated Mr. Leveredge.

"Don't be a fool, Leveredge," exclaimed Crawley, with growing irritation. "You must be mad!"

"Then you don't mean to meet us?"

"Of course not. If you like I'll do you a new picture, although I shall want more than a thousand for it this time."

"Oh, you will, will you?" sneered Leveredge. "That's very good of you; but I'm afraid, my dear old friend, you misunderstand me. I'm here to offer you a choice of alternatives."

There could be no mistaking the evil intent of the man. His sinister suggestion was patent.

Crawley rose abruptly. He had gone a little pale.

"Am I to understand that you are attempting to blackmail me?" he asked grimly.

"Oh, my dear Crawley," lisped Leveredge, lifting his fat hands in pious horror, "the idea! I was merely suggesting that, if we could not get compensation for the irreparable wrong you have done us in one way—well, we must try an alternative course. One must live, you know. All's fair when it comes to a game of this kind; and I never pretend to be a philanthropist."

"Pray, what is the alternative course you suggest?" asked Crawley frigidly.

As he spoke there was a knock at the door and Hutton entered.

"Mr. Brooke!" he announced, and Godfrey Brooke entered the room.

It would have been difficult to say which of the men was the more surprised—Leveredge or Crawley. Certainly the advent of Godfrey Brooke at this precise moment was about the last thing in the world that Noel Crawley expected. He had, he remembered, only just read Brooke's telegram inviting him down to Hatchington. In it there had been no mention of calling. Brooke was a busy man, booked up to the hilt with appointments. Altogether his sudden and, in the light of recent events, singularly dramatic appearance, seemed to the excited Crawley a very forcible answer to his question.

For the moment he thought of nothing less than that it had been prearranged with Leveredge; though, had he had the common sense to consider the question seriously he would have immediately seen the absurdity of such a conclusion.

Also, had he but taken the trouble to look at the art dealer he would have perceived in that gentleman's face nothing more and nothing less than sheer annoyance at the untimely interruption, and he might have very reasonably deduced that the great Godfrey Brooke was in no way associated in his mind with the lady Leveredge had seen with Crawley in the taxicab in St. James' street the previous afternoon.

However, Noel Crawley at that precise moment was not in the mood to review events calmly and rationally. He was excited and jumped at ridiculous conclusions.

He was saved, however, from doing an absurd thing by Brooke himself.

"Old man," exclaimed the traveler, seizing Crawley's limp and clammy hand, and apparently quite oblivious of the presence of Mr. Leveredge, "let me congratulate you! Wonderful picture! Really wonderful, 'pon my soul. Wouldn't have thought you capable of it, Crawley.

"You know I am not the sort of chap to go silly over paintings and things of that sort, don't you? I have always found such a lot of other and more important things to trouble about; but, you see, old man, I am sort of specially interested in you and so I made a point of it, and went to the Leveredge Gallery in Bond street this very afternoon, and saw your marvelous 'Circe,' paid my shilling with the rest of 'em, and, by Jove, old son, you could hardly move in the place! Leveredge, or who ever the chap is who runs the show, must be making a fortune out of you, confound him!"

By this time Mr. Leveredge was beginning to sit up and listen most attentively; and the expression on his face was not altogether one of complete satisfaction.

As for Crawley he was completely dumbfounded. All he could do for the moment was to stand and stare at Brooke with incredulous amazement, not altogether unmixed with apprehension. Was Brooke fooling him? That was the first question that came to him, but he soon dismissed it.

The idea was absurd. Brooke was far too great a man to take the trouble to play a foolish game of that sort. He was perfectly natural in his manner and speech, and appeared to be totally oblivious of the presence of the other man. It was, as a matter of fact, somewhat characteristic of the man who had slowly but surely attained the position of looking upon the presence of any other man as being quite subsidiary to his own.

When Brooke was there no one else existed. It was only natural in a man who, for the greater part of his life, had been looked upon by the men with whom he came in contact as a king in a far wider sense than any European monarch.

Their Married Life

Helen Exhibits a Good Deal of Tact

Copyright, 1915, by International News Service.

HELEN saw the last guest depart with a sense of relief that she could not have put in words. The fact that she was under a nervous strain more or less and had been all day had tired her out completely. Then, too, the excitement of receiving the flowers from Lieutenant Roberts had been a strain on her nerves and the fact that Warren had kept his word and had not returned was disquieting.

"I couldn't eat a thing," she said as her mother urged her to come to the table and have something to eat.

"Just a little steak, dear, and Nora will make you a nice, strong cup of coffee."

"Oh, mother, don't mention steak. I couldn't eat anything really. I think I ate about a dozen sandwiches and two plates of salad. I really feel quite ill."

Nora was busy straightening the living room. She had folded up the card tables and had everything almost neat again before she came into the dining room to serve dinner.

"Aren't the flowers sweet, Mrs. Curtis?" she said as she passed Helen.

Again Helen was reminded of the expensive gift. Warren would not like it, but then Lieutenant Roberts was so much younger than she was, nothing more than a boy. Surely there was no fault Warren could find in the flowers, and yet she knew he would be disagreeable.

"Keep something warm for Mr. Curtis, Nora, and we won't wait any longer."

"All right, ma'am," said Nora, well pleased, and Helen and her mother went into the dining room, Helen to pick at her food and the older woman to make a substantial meal.

Helen roamed around the different rooms looking in to see if Winifred were all right and then glancing at herself in her own mirror as she passed. Seven-thirty came and no Warren.

"I think he might have telephoned," said Helen finally as she threw herself down into a chair and looked at her mother for sympathy. Sometimes I think Warren is frightfully unfair. You know yourself how perfectly furious he would be if I were to be late for dinner."

The telephone rang at that moment, and Helen jumped to answer it. Her mother heard her little gasp of surprise and the "You?" in an incredulous tone.

"But Mr. Curtis isn't home and I don't know just what time he will be in, he hasn't let me know. Why, yes, if you would like to come up tonight. Yes, indeed; oh, and I want to thank you for the roses, they are gorgeous."

Helen's mother looked up from the little dress she was embroidering for Winifred. She had perfect confidence in Helen's judgment about things, but she did think that it was a little unwise to let the young man come up when Warren wasn't there.

Helen came into the room a moment later.

"I want you to stay here, mother, then Warren won't have a chance to disapprove."

"Are you sure you're doing right, Helen?"

Helen looked at her in surprise.

"Why of course, you know I am not doing anything wrong. I haven't a thing to do this evening, and why shouldn't I let the lieutenant come up. If Warren had acted as he should he would have been here to help entertain."

Helen's mother could not understand her daughter's independence, and yet as she thought of herself there was no real reason why Helen should not entertain her friends. The only thing that worried her was the fact that from the flowers the young man might be learning to care for Helen more than he should.

Helen put on a new gown, a very becoming flame-colored taffeta.

As she was arranging the roses the key clicked in the latch and Warren came in.

"Hello, dear!" said Helen, going out to meet him. "Come out to the dining-room and have your dinner."

"I had something to eat downtown." And then taking in Helen's dress: "Why so dressy?"

"I entertained today. Have you forgotten?"

"Oh, yes, I remembered that. But did you wear that dress this afternoon? You look as if you had just finished making yourself beautiful."

"I have, dear. Don't you notice the roses? Aren't they beautiful? Guess who sent them?"

Warren looked up suspiciously.

"Well, who?"

"Lieutenant Roberts, and he is coming up to call tonight. Hurry up and brush up so that you'll look nice."

Warren scowled and looked as though he would refuse to appear, but for once Helen's tactful good humor and lack of questions saved the day, for he vanished into the bedroom with a muttered remark about being too tired to dress. Helen was relieved, too, although she wouldn't have admitted it for worlds.

(Another incident in this entertaining series will appear here soon).

I DIDN'T SEE YOU IN GERSON'S CIGAR STORE LAST NIGHT, ABE!
WHILE YOU WAS IN GERSON'S STORE, I WAS ENJOINING MYSELF READING IN MINE FRONT ROOM A BOOK, HUCKELBERREH FINN, BY MARK TWAIN!
SAMUEL CLEMENS WROTE HUCKLEBERRY FINN!
WHO — CLEMENS? DON'T COMMENCE SPARKBAUM — I CAN SHOW YOU IN WHITE AND BLECK THAT ITS MARK TWAIN!
LET'S GO TO THE PUBLIC LIBRARY AND I'LL PROVE ITS CLEMENS!
ALLARIGHT, SHOW ME! REMEMBER, I SAID MARK TWAIN!
IT WAS HERE THAT SAMUEL CLEMENS AND MARK TWAIN ARE THE SAME MAN!
WE BOTH LOSE! I DIDN'T KNOW HIS NAME WAS SAMUEL CLEMENS AND YOU DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS MARK TWAIN!

ONE DAY LEFT IN TOURS SERIES D

When the winning twenty-five candidates in the AMERICAN'S Great California Tours Contest are speeding over the plains of Nebraska or crossing the wonderful Rocky Mountains, the weeks passed in securing the vote coupons will seem like a very small matter indeed.

With only one more day in Series "D" and only two remaining contest periods of fifteen days each besides the short nine-day final series "G," it should be quite clear to all that there is no time for dilly-dallying in the matter of vote-getting.

Only FORTY more contest days. FILL UP FOR A FLYING START IN SERIES "E," WHICH STARTS WEDNESDAY.

Blood Risings Begin A Mere Speck

Stop Them From Growing Large and Dangerous.

Nearly everyone who uses S. S. S. for the blood recalls a friend who went through untold suffering as the result of a mere pimple or small blood rising. A host of people did not realize until too late, what may result from a slight skin abrasion. But they recovered if they used S. S. S., and in almost every village and hamlet, every crossroad and away back off the road is someone who will tell you how S. S. S., the famous blood purifier, restored his health.

It is a most interesting fact that this remarkable vegetable medicine overhauls the blood in a manner that excites curious minds.

But it acts in accordance with accepted physiological laws and yet its effect is almost beyond comprehension to those who are wedded to such drugs as mercury, calomel, arsenic, iodide of potash, copper and other baneful influences which all the world bears silent testimony to their destructive tendencies.

S. S. S. is indeed a nature's tribute to what we need and it is worthy of note that in almost any drug store throughout the country you will find it regularly in stock. Get a bottle today. And if you believe yours is a peculiar case, write to the Medical Adviser of the Swift Specific Co., 106 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Our word for it, he is one of Georgia's appreciated specialists, retired from active practice but proud of his name and of his recognized ability.

MAURICE T. IACCHERI of No. 97 Transit street, Providence, a hustling candidate in the AMERICAN'S California Tours Contest. He says: "Providence will send me through a winner. From now on, watch my vote total grow."

Suffragists to Hold Open Air Meeting

Open air suffrage meetings will be held tonight in the city proper, Charlestown, South Boston, Dorchester, Roxbury and Hyde Park. Many prominent women, identified with the suffrage movement, will speak.

Series "E" Begins Wednesday

GET A FLYING START!

With only one more day in Series "D", every candidate in the American's California Tours Contest ought to be busy rounding up every possible vote coupon and getting their followers in shape for a flying start with the first coupon of Series "E" which appears Wednesday.

In just a little over one month more, the big race will have been run. Don't stop now to wonder whether you are going to be one of the fortunate ones who will start on July 21 for the far West as the guest of this newspaper, but devote all your spare time to accumulating the greatest possible number of vote coupons. If you do this, the vote totals will take care of themselves.

It is the constant effort that counts—with a little unceasing work EVERY DAY, you will be surprised to see what you have accomplished in piling up a big vote total. It's like saving a few pennies every day—the pennies do not seem much by themselves but the total, at the end of the year, amounts to a surprising sum.

There are too many people who go at things in a half-hearted manner. The result is that the people they try to interest quickly sense this indifference and are, themselves, just as unenthusiastic.

Unless YOU are enthusiastic, you can hardly expect the man or woman you try to interest in your vote gathering campaign to be bubbling over with eagerness.

All those who will be in the lead at the end of Series "A" and Series "B", which will be published in next Sunday's American, got there by sheer force of work plus enthusiasm. The American's advice to you, if you wish to be one of the guests on this remarkable trip to the Pacific Coast, is "ENTHUSE!"

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS.

Financial Editor

Stocks opened strong and active. [illegible] increased confidence on the part of market operators. Over Sunday [illegible] in Europe did not diminish belief that this country is in a strong position and that conditions warrant higher valuation of securities. Western railroads report that traffic is growing and optimism prevails in banking and [illegible] circles of that section. War stocks were the strongest group, but coppers and railroads also advanced. The [illegible] effect of Italy's becoming a belligerent was to cause a brisk demand for all classes of issues in New York. Italian [illegible] during the first few minutes [illegible] from [illegible] points.

STOCKS MOVE UPWARD.

[illegible]

Most of the early business in Boston was in [illegible] issues. A round lot of August [illegible] sold at 17 cents a pound on Saturday. Among stocks to advance here were Butte & Superior [illegible], American Zinc [illegible], Alaska Gold [illegible], Copper Range 1, North Butte [illegible], [illegible], Quincy 1, Tamarack [illegible], [illegible] and [illegible].

EXPECT A BULL MOVEMENT.

In regard to the market outlook a [illegible] financial publication says:

"Outside capitalists who neglected to get aboard the bull wagon last February are now largely committed to the constructive side and the big men very generally are long of stocks in anticipation of renewal of the forward movement before long. This does not mean, of course, that they are combined for a campaign or that they are acting in concert marketwise. It does mean that financiers of the calibre of Jacob H. Schiff, J. P. Morgan, George F. Baker, Daniel Guggenheim, William Rockefeller and Daniel G. Reid believe that the country is [illegible] to a standstill and is on the upgrade industrially for a long pull, notwithstanding occasional backward steps on the part of the security market."

OUR FIRST DUTY IS TO MAINTAIN PEACE; OUR NEXT DUTY IS TO PREPARE FOR WAR

Will New York Republicans Still Follow Barnes?

THE lone juror who for a time tied up the jury in the Roosevelt-Barnes libel case has won for himself a unique place in the eyes of the public today. He is not only the one man of a jury of twelve who failed at once to see that Colonel Roosevelt told the precise truth about Mr. Barnes, but he probably is the only man in the United States who would be thus blind.

If he had stood out against his fellows on the jury to the end of all time he would not have changed the general public opinion that in denominating Mr. Barnes a boss, and in asserting that his political methods included the corrupt alliance of the Republican machine with the Democratic machine, and of crooked business with crooked politics, Colonel Roosevelt did not go beyond the facts as proved.

William Barnes comes out of the savagely contested lawsuit with little remaining character, either as a politician or as a journalist. As a politician he has employed his domination of other men and his control of the party organization to accomplish such ignoble ends as getting for himself a slice of the profits of the State printing. To attain this petty purpose he has strengthened his political power by forming alliances with those forces of predatory wealth which are only too ready to maintain in power politicians who at a time of need will do their bidding. He has called himself a Republican, but has been often ready to advance the interests of the least reputable of the forces in the Democratic party. He has been a boss for what there was in it for him, and what there was in it seems to have been a share in the extravagant profits made by the persons holding contracts for State printing.

The code of ethics of the journalist should be higher than that of a politician. But Barnes has put them on the same plane. As the responsible editor of his own newspaper he has defended the ignoble deals to which he was a party as a politician, and has used the power of the press to bolster up a political machine which seems to have been employed only for contemptible ends.

But in bringing the libel suit against Mr. Roosevelt Mr. Barnes may have unwittingly done a public service. Certainly he has added prodigiously to the complications which now beset the Colonel in his efforts to return to his former political ties. Mr. Roosevelt may despair of the future of the Progressive party. Some of his recent utterances indicate that he does. BUT IT IS NO LONGER CONCEIVABLE THAT, HOWEVER DISCOURAGING THE PROGRESSIVE OUTLOOK, MR. ROOSEVELT COULD LEAVE THAT PARTY TO REJOIN THE REPUBLICAN PARTY, COMMANDED AND LED BY BARNES OR ROOT OR MEN OF THAT TYPE.

And it is to be noted that, even though the final verdict in this case was against him, Mr. Barnes is the leader and supreme master of the Republican organization in New York State, and bids fair to be so for some time to come.

The Work of Elbert Hubbard

The great number of letters received by the AMERICAN eulogizing the late Elbert Hubbard and expressing the warm gratitude of readers of his helpful articles bear striking testimony to the worth of the work he has done. It was not given to many men to think so clearly and look out upon society from so radical a viewpoint as did the Seer of East Aurora. He had his enemies and critics as every man out of the ordinary always has. Indeed, the man who presumes to think out of tune with the unthinking mob always encounters criticism.

But in the main Hubbard thought wisely, and, unlike many who have had the vision of the prophets, was able to express his opinion and his comments on public matters and affairs in so engaging a way as to compel attention. There was nothing of the dry-as-dust about his preachments. They were radical, startling, epigrammatic, and always compelled attention. He has done unquestionably a great work in rousing the public to think on progressive lines, and his death in the Lusitania disaster was a calamity greatly to be deplored.

Mr. Hubbard left a number of manuscripts for publication. Some of these have been used since his death by the AMERICAN and some will be used later. The remainder will be published at regular intervals in Hearst's Magazine.

A Song

By William F. Kirk

THERE is a voice that is calling
Out of the Westland for me,
Out where the red sun is falling
Silently into the sea.
I could forget all the pain, dear,
If you could come from above;
Bloom for me just once again, dear,
Wonderful red rose of love.

REFRAIN.

Red rose of love, bloom again, bloom again,
Each crimson petal a kiss;
Come back once more from the never-seen shore,
Bring the old fragrance and bliss.
Come from the sky where you're lonely,
Drift to my arms like the rain.
Bring back the dew and the rapture we knew,
Red rose of love, bloom again!

Don't Believe in Fairy Tales, Girls

Dorothy Dix Warns Young Women Workers to Beware of Dreams and Fiction Princes—Face Truth and Work Up with Man in Own Sphere of Life Is Only Safe Plan

By Dorothy Dix

IF I could say one word more earnest than any other to working girls, it would be this: DON'T BELIEVE IN FAIRY TALES, GIRLS.

The story of Cinderella and the Fairy Prince is fiction. It never happens in real life. It never happened to any girl. It assuredly is never going to happen to you; so get the silly idea out of your head and get down to the real business of life.

Do you know why the working girl so easily falls a victim to the wiles of any well-dressed man? It is because she still believes in fairy tales.

She really lives in a romance that she makes up for herself. In it some god-like male creature, who is a happy combination of a matinee hero and a philanthropic millionaire, catches a glimpse of her at her counter, or in her cashier's wicket, or over her sewing machine, and he falls madly in love with her, and marries her, and takes her off to live in a golden palace, and she becomes a society queen, and has her picture in the newspapers every day.

That's the stuff the working girl's dream is made of, and she's so anxious to find this Fairy Prince that she fits his cap on every man she meets who looks like what she considers a "swell." He doesn't even have to be a deep, dark, subtle villain to deceive her. She deceives herself into believing that a street flirtation means an overwhelming passion that she has inspired in the man's breast; and that a few joy rides and a dinner or two at a restaurant, and a Summer excursion mean marriage in the end.

Many a girl has wakened up from her dream of the Fairy Prince to wish that she had never been born, and to find that her hero had just been amusing an idle hour with her, and when he had tired of her, had thrown her aside like a broken toy, careless whether he had wrecked her life.

Quit dreaming, girls. Wake up and face the truth, and that is that men rarely marry out of their class. They may find the working girl pretty, and piquant, and her very unconventionality diverting, but when a man of family, and wealth and tradition marries he almost always picks out for a wife a woman who knows how to give dinners, and run an establishment, and who can add her fortune and her social prestige to his.

Of course, there are exceptions to this rule, but the average working girl has just as much chance to be elected President as she has to marry a millionaire.

Look with suspicion upon every man above your own grade in life who offers you attentions, girls. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred he is a wolf in sheep's clothing, and he has exactly the same intentions toward you as a hungry wolf would have toward a defenceless little lamb.

Another great harm that girls' artless faith in fairy tales does is that in looking out for the Fairy Prince, who never comes, they only too often overlook the honest young suitor who is on the ground, and who would make a million times better husband than any romantic hero. Naturally, if you were expecting to suddenly be snatched away from your daily grind to a state of luxury you would turn up your nose at the prospect of a little flat built for two.

That's why many a girl turns down the good, honest-hearted young mechanic or clerk, who can offer her only the love of his heart and the work of his hands and the chance to build up in life with him. Her silly head is filled with fool dreams about being a millionaire's bride, and by the time she wakes up from her dream her chance of real happiness has gone.

Still another harm that believing in fairy tales does girls is that it paralyzes their efforts. Every employer will tell you that when a woman gets down to business, and gives her mind to it, she can cut circles around almost all of her male competitors. Nobody can remember so many details. Nobody is shrewder than a woman, or loves to bargain better. No man can be as fanatically intent on one subject as a woman can be.

All of the special sex peculiarities of women lend themselves to success in business; yet, in spite of these qualifications, women are generally paid less than men in business simply because their work is worth less.

And the reason of this is that few women think it worth while to ever learn their business thoroughly because they don't expect to follow it except for a little while. They are depending on somebody else to come along and support them, and bestow upon them the money they want, instead of earning it themselves.

It's the fatal belief in Fairy Tales again, and if the time ever comes when girls realize that there's going to be no magic wand business in theirs, and that the only way that their serge suits will be changed into spangled robes, and their street car into a limousine, is by their own good work, then we shall not have to pass laws securing a minimum wage for girls. They'll earn a living salary, with frills on it, for themselves.

Here Is a Chance to Use Your Judgment---$100 for the Best Answer

What Is the Best Thing in Hearst's Magazine, and Why Does It Succeed Where Others Fail?

Front Page Hearst's Magazine for May.

The late Charles Frohman said, "One play succeeds, and it is hard to tell WHY. Another play fails, and it is hard to tell WHY. It would be of the greatest value to managers and playwrights if, after a success, they knew exactly WHY THE THING HAD PLEASED THE PUBLIC."

Hearst's Mazazine is a comparatively new publication; it outranks in popularity and success all others in its class.

WHY is this?

We offer $100 for the best answer to this question.

We know some of the reasons why this particular magazine succeeds. The greatest writers of fiction contribute to the magazine—Winston Churchill, Robert W. Chambers, George Randolph Chester, F. P. Dunne, the "Mr. Dooley" genius; Bruno Lessing, David Belasco, James J. Montague, Rex Beach, Arthur Stringer and others.

The best artists in the United States illustrate the magazine. They include Charles Dana Gibson, Howard Chandler Christy, A. B. Wenzell, James Montgomery Flagg, Penrhyn Stanlaws, Charles A. Winter and Vincent Aderente.

Hearst's Magazine devotes attention to earnest topics, spends a great deal of money to make of itself a power in education, in addition to spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to supply to its readers the most interesting entertainment.

But the BEST fiction, the BEST pictures, the BEST color printing ALONE do not account for the success of Hearst's Magazine.

CHARACTER, INDIVIDUALITY, CONSISTENT AND PERSISTENT EFFORT ALONG SOME CERTAIN LINE—THERE YOU WILL FIND THE SECRET OF EVERY SUCCESS.

When you look at a magazine that "goes" powerfully it is as though you were looking at a watch that keeps perfect time.

If you did not know how a watch is made you might attribute its virtues to its gold case, beautiful engraving, many jewels, finely polished wheels, or even to the beautiful chain. But if you understood watches you would know that first of all comes the MAIN SPRING. So it is with a publication, whether it be a newspaper like this with a circulation larger than that of all the other Boston evening papers put together, or whether it be a great magazine distancing its competitors.

We should like to have the opinion of our readers as to THE CAUSE OF THE SUCCESS OF HEARST'S MAGAZINE. And we will pay ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for the best letter received in reply to this question between now and June 15.

Letters should not be more than two hundred words in length.

A letter of ten words might win the prize.

Address your letter to the Editor of the Boston American, and write on the outside of the envelope the words, "Hearst's Magazine."

If you find that you are unable to get a copy of Hearst's Magazine for May, which is now on the newsstands, you may have to wait until the June issue is published, on May 29.
